

Have you wearied of the cold, clinical look so prevalent in contemporary decorating? Now, with Henredon's new Custom Folio Three, you can give your home an aura of warmth, grace and individuality without sacrificing the contemporary mood.

There's a quality about a home with Henredon

The Custom Folio Three collection introduces a totally original concept of contemporary furniture design. Moldings soften the clean, simple lines. Forms are functional, but decorative as well. There's texture to the woods. And the custom quality of Henredon crafting is evident in every detail (no slick "assembly line" look here!). The effect on your decorating is heartwarming. And house-warming, too! Remember that, come Christmas or a wedding. A gift of Henredon furniture will have the same wonderful effect.

NCORPORATING LIVING FOR YOUNG HOMEMAKERS

REYNOLDS

On the cover: Comfortable chairs, a friendly round table and a genial hearth issue an irresistible invitation to Mr. and Mrs. Bertin Gamble's most unkitcheny kitchen in Wayzata, Minn. The fireplace tile-studded at one end of the large rectangular room faces a great bowed window overlooking Lake Minnetonka, a stone's throw away. Food preparation and clean-up centers are confined for the most part to one long wall, while the opposite wall, behind the sofa, is devoted to butler's-pantry storage for silver and china. Because blue is Mrs. Gamble's favorite color, she collects old Delft and blue Meissen. Two Delft plaques, now sconces on the chimney breast, were the springboard for the room's color scheme. The pattern of the Delft sparked the choice of toile curtains and upholstery, and the rug was braided to order in Delft colors. The most informal spot in a rather formal house, the kitchen is used for breakfasting, lunch and one of Mrs. Gamble's favorite forms of entertaining-small indoor barbecues. Steaks are grilled in the fireplace and eaten at the handsome dining table, a reproduction in old wood by the same gifted cabinetmaker responsible for much of the furniture throughout the house. Architect: Karl Humphrey of Humphrey & Hardenburgh. Interior design: Levey Studios. For other rooms that spell the word welcome in a variety of ways, see page 216.

We made this sterling silver teapot circa 1798. (It's not for sale.)

El Grandee, 4-piece place setting, $39.25

This sterling silver spoon was made at Towle yesterday.

(No extra charge for the 166 years of craftsmanship.)

ACTUALLY, the Towle silver tradition is over two hundred and seventy-four years old. It was born in Newbury-port, Massachusetts, and Towle continues in the same place today. You rarely find tradition like that anymore.

That's why there's something extra in today's Towle sterling. You can see it. You can feel it. You can sense it. For, like its ancestors, every Towle piece is meant to be admired...and used. Use your Towle sterling for fancy dinners. Or family suppers. Put it in your dishwasher.

Towle sterling is as practical as it is beautiful. (Use it regularly and it requires very little polishing.)

Take a good look at Towle before you buy. Study its varied elegance. Pick up a piece. Balance it. Examine its perfect design, its grace, its grandeur that could come only from the oldest silvermaking tradition in America; it dates from 1690.

But you'd better hurry. You've already missed 274 years of great silver.

Prices for 4-piece place setting (teaspoon, fork, knife, salad fork) including federal tax.

THE GOURMET CENTER

A company of modern plug-in appliances can be like so many extra hands when you are preparing a complicated dish or a meal-in-a-hurry. Admittedly, these helpers take up counter and/or storage space, especially when each is individually powered, and has its own trailing cord. A new adjunct called the Gourmet Center, however, gives you a whole family of appliances in one, since five different attachments can be operated by the same motor. What's more, two can be operated at the same time. The Can Opener, for instance, or the Knife Sharpener can stay on duty at one end of the power unit, while the other three specialists take turns at the opposite end. In the base of the power unit is a compartment for storing the one and only cord. Made by Hamilton Beach, the Gourmet Center costs $29.95 for the power unit alone—the various attachments are sold separately.

1 Salad Maker attachment has a large hopper and five cones (a grater-shredder, one with julienne talents, plus thick, thin and ripple slicers). It grooms most fruits, vegetables and cheese for use as garnishes, in salads or cooked recipes. $14.95. 2 Another specialist powered by basic unit is the Ice Crusher. Seven stainless steel blades crush a trayful of ice in short order. $14.95. 3 Knife Sharpener has a honing wheel for regular straight-edge knives. Of gray and polished aluminum. $4.95. 4 Can Opener does its work with a steel cutting wheel, has a removable magnet to hold lids. $6.95. 5 Meat Grinder comes with two blades for coarse and fine grinds. $9.95. (A sausage stuffer device is sold separately.) The power unit has a push-button release for quick changes.

A team that should prove helpful when you are concocting a casserole is the Meat Grinder paired with the Can Opener. Grinder can also take on vegetables or fruits. The Salad Maker, wearing shredder attachment, makes short work of raw carrots while the Sharpener, in place at other end, hones up a knife for thin-slicing tomatoes.

Its tasteful lines belong with any decor, and outlive fickle style changes. But Steinway beauty isn't skin deep, there is an inner glory. BRONZE BY BARBEDIENNE

Could you tell me the age of this French clock? The label "Barbedien —Paris" is on the dial and "F. Barbedienne—Fondeur" is recorded on the base of the statue.

J. L. C.—Newnan, Ga.

The figure of the classic huntress Diana on your clock is the work of François Barbedienne, a leading French founder who won many diplomas and the Legion of Honor for the quality of his bronzes. Some of his signed bronzes are in museum collections. Your clock dates between 1870 and 1890.

ENGLISH TEAPOT

Any information on this teapot will be appreciated. It is marked "Old Staffordshire Ware England."

D. M. A.—Indianapolis, Ind.

Your novelty teapot in the form of a man in eighteenth-century dress was made by William Kent, Ltd., Burslem, Staffordshire, after 1900. "Old Stafford-shire Ware" is the firm's trade-mark to this day.

BIRD-CAGE CLOCK

CHINESE EXPORT CABINET

I hope you can tell me the date when my small clock was made. It is marked "The National Clock Company, Made in Japan."

R. F. K .- Kankakee, Ill.

Your bird-cage clock was made in Japan for the National Clock Company of Brooklyn, N. Y., between 1900 and 1930.

What can you tell me about this teakwood curio cabinet? Friends who cherished it gave it to us forty years ago.

J. D. P.—Oak Lawn, Ill.

It looks like the kind of Chinese cabinet made by native craftsmen in leading seaport cities during the last half of the nineteenth century for export to the U. S.

Welcome home after all these antiseptic years to rich mellow carpet colors like this.

The Hearth Tones in all-wool Carpet by Magee.

New colors inspired by the warmth of the old. The lustre of cranberry glass. A leather bound classic. Candlelight.

The welcoming brass at the door. Vintage shadings of blue and green and gold and red and brown that bring the hospitality of a country house up to the fifteenth floor. It's astonishing, really. Sweep this new mellowness into a room filled with contemporary paintings. And listen. You'll hear conversation again.

The Hearth Tones in All Wool Carpet by Magee

CATTLE-HORN ARMCHAIR

My husband's family has had this chair, made of matching steer horns, for over forty-five years. Is it rare? W. L. S .- Levittown, N. Y.

Cattle-horn chairs, tables, stools and hat racks are known to have been made by several factories in Denver about 1880 to 1900, usually for wealthy ranch owners. Your chair must be one of those.

SCOTCH CLOCK

Recently this clock, a family heirloom, was brought to this country from Ireland. On the brass dial is the name "Robt Knox, Paisley." Is he the maker? S. M. B .- Pittsfield, Mass.

Robert Knox was the maker of the movement for your tall case clock. He worked in Paisley, Scotland, from 1820 to 1837. The case was undoubtedly made by a local cabinetmaker.

PAPIER-MÂCHÉ TABLE

How old is my game table and fire screen? The base is wood, the top, mother-of-pearl inlay and some composition material.

P. D. B .- Athens, Ohio

Your table is not a fire screen, but a Victorian pedestal table with a papier-mâché top inlaid for playing checkers or chess. It might have been made by the English firm, Jennens & Bettridge, between 1840 and 1865.

DUNHAM SOUARE PIANO

This solid rosewood piano has the nameplate "Dunham of New York." I can find nothing in reference books about this make of piano. Could you J. W. F .- Durham, N. C. give me any information?

It is known that John Dunham made pianos in New York City about 1850 to 1865, but there is no other recorded data about him. From the style of the case, especially the octagonal, baluster-shaped legs, I would date your instrument as having been made before 1860.

Every scientist knows that wool is resilient. Naturally curly. Test it: step on it, press it down and see how it bounces right back. Feels good, doesn't it?

It takes so little space to get that second bathroom or powder room

These American-Standard "Space-Makers" tuck away into an area as small as 4'x 4'

With American-Standard fixtures, and without overburdening your budget, you can put an extra bathroom or a powder room in a nook or a cranny. Perhaps a space at the end of a hallway or an extra closet.

Six designs for powder rooms and second bathrooms are featured on the opposite page. Check the floor space each requires and look around your house for a similar space you can spare. Then check the prices in the captions at the right, and you'll see for yourself why American-Standard is the pacemaker as well as the "space maker" in convenient, modern bathrooms and powder rooms.

Look closely. This is misted silver And we call it Firenze:

So new it has never celebrated even a first wedding anniversary. Firenze by Wallace. Silver misted with texture. Patiently, each shaft of precious sterling is carefully and delicately textured, by hand, to a beautiful Florentine finish. Young. Contemporary. Imaginative. Yet because of the ancient art of the Florentines, it is ageless. You can use it with the most traditional crystal and china you will ever inherit or collect. Firenze by Wallace. From the collection: Dawn Mist, Evening Mist, and the enchanting new Spanish Lace. Send for free literature on Firenze today.

WHAT'S NEW FOR LIVING

UNORTHODOX HOUSING SITES. In the future, houses may be built under water, under ground, on heretofore uninhabitable deserts and mountains, if some of the displays at the New York World's Fair are a true forecast. Exhibitions such as General Motors Diorama, showing an underwater house, suggest that man will be able to create and control whole new physical environments for himself. Totally new kinds of apparatus will supply air and heat, run household machinery. Obviously, a new architecture, new ways of living are sure to emerge.

WEATHER-AND BOY-PROOF BICYCLE. A streamlined bike has been fashioned of Fiberglas-reinforced plastic, a material successfully tested in pleasure boats and other sports equipment for its durability and resistance to the elements. Model below, $90. Deluxe models have two-speed automatic gear shift, power brake, chrome package rack. Color choice: black, blue, red and cream. Febs Industries Inc.. 1 East 42nd St., New York, N. Y. 10017.

FOOD LORE OF THE WORLD-from the gastronomical favorites of Confucius and Henry VIII to facts about the origins of dishes from borscht to tempura. A gourmet's guide to history is picturesquely and amusingly presented in a new booklet, "Food Wonders of the World," created by the Kellogg Company in co-operation with the U.S. Committee for UNICEF. You will discover, for instance, that the first loaf of yeast bread "happened" in about 1500 B.C. when an absent-minded Egyptian baker left some dough standing out overnight; that the Roman Emperor Lucullus gave his chef a whole city in payment for his epicurean creations; that Baked Alaska was invented by a New York chef to celebrate the acquisition of the territory in 1867. All profits from sale of the book will benefit the United Nations Children's Fund. To order, send 50 cents to Food Wonders of the World, P.O. Box 773, Detroit, Mich. 48232.

FUR-COVERED SCALES for weight-watchers. You can get a bathroom scale covered with a foot-pleasing furlike pile fabric that comes in pretty colors, can be cleaned with detergent. The oval scale, measuring 14½ by 11 inches, comes with a selection of covers that includes ice pink, antique gold, bronze green and sky blue. $12.95. By The Borg-Erickson Corporation, 1133 N. Kilbourn Ave., Chicago, Ill. 60651.

OUTDOOR-INDOOR CARPET that is impervious to the elements. You can cover your own outdoors-terrace, porch, poolside, boat dockwith carpeting made of Vectra fibre (polypropolene olefin) that won't rot or mildew, can withstand rain, sun or snow. Because of its indestructability, it is also popular for shore cottages, ski lodges, indoor areas such as playrooms or even a practice putting green. Can be hosed or vacuumed; a burn or stain can be remedied by cutting out a square of damaged carpet and replacing it with new. Comes in four widths, between 3 and 12 feet, that you can seam together with double-faced mastic tape or make adhere to a surface permanently with a waterproof adhesive. Nine colors include deep green, blue, bronze and cardinal red. $5.40 a square yard. Carpet made by Ozite Corp., 7120 Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill. 60654.

TURNABOUT CHAIR for those who like to sit astride or side-saddle as well as in the conventional manner. Hans Olsen designed this teak chair, with its padded back/elbow rest and hinged reading/writing board, after an original royal Danish saddle chair belonging to King Frederick VII, ruler of Denmark in the mid-nineteenth century. Various-sized hinged boards available, including one that forms a square game table. Chair, below, is $119. Distributed by Moreddi. Inc., 1326 Obispo Avenue, Long Beach, Calif. 90804.

MESSAGE-TAKING ACCESSORIES essential to a well-run household. Two such handy devices are:

• A telephone-writing "caddie," designed to hang alongside a wall phone, eliminates the mad scramble to find a pad and pencil, the juggling act of trying to write a message in mid-air. The front panel of this 3-inch-thick cabinet drops to form a writing surface. A personal phone directory and three filing compartments come with it. Available in six colors: pink, yellow, turquoise, coppertone, white and green. $9.95. By Caloric Corporation, Township Line and Washington Lane, Wyncote, Pa. 19095.

• An electric "message center" enables you to leave a recorded message for other members of the family or babysitters—more personal and more thorough than a scribbled note. You can record up to three minutes, and store or erase it, all without ever removing the tape. A signal light tells you a message has been recorded. You push the "play" button to hear it. The recorder measures 10 by 5½ by 2½ inches. $39.95. By Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Metuchen, N. J. 08840.

CANING as a decorative motif. Not only do you see caning as a functional part of much contemporary furniture, but also as a pattern on drapery fabrics, wallpapers and rugs, even shower curtains. (For a needlepoint rug in a caning pattern, see Creative Crafts, October, 1964 H&G, page 202.) Paisley and bamboo are popular motifs, too. The latter is simulated in the wood parts of furniture fashioned after the Regency styles, and as a pattern in new vinyl flooring tile.

Beauty is not all you get from Wallace

To add to the excitement of setting your table with beautiful new Spanish Lace, Wallace will give you an enchanting pair of sterling candlesticks...yes...in Spanish Lace. The same misted Firenze finish. The same delicate tracery. Candlesticks that are a perfect match to this beautiful new silver pattern you love. And you don't have to buy a king's ransom of silver to get them. Wallace gives you these $22.50 candlesticks right from the beginning with your starter set of just 16 pieces of Spanish Lace.

If you order eight complete place settings—that's 40 pieces in all—Wallace will give you a handsome chest and your Spanish Lace candlesticks, a $52.50 value. (Offer expires December 31, 1964).

Beautiful Spanish Lace...young, romantic, imaginative...and so new you will be one of the first brides in the world to have it. Aren't you glad you picked this happy moment to be married.

The way Lees makes flowers bloom, they won't wilt.

This is truth, not poetry.

At Lees, blooming is a kind of Turkish bath we give our carpets.

Our object is to spread the yarn. Plump it out. Give it extra body.

Once we make a carpet bloom, it's for good. We give you more little extras, too.

Like the best wools, nylons and acrylics seven countries can produce.

Like good pure dyes that can stand up to air and wear.

Like special tough backs.

Like eagle-eye inspections that catch the little things. Snags, ravels, sprouts, knots, grins, puckers, wrinkles, bulges, streaks, flaws, mismatches, and even suspicious smells.

When we print Lees, bold and clear, on the back of a carpet, there are no bugs.

Are you buying a conservative broadloom? Or a flowery one?

Bear in mind. A rose by any other name than Lees is not the same.

For a lot of good, down-to-earth reasons, "those heavenly carpets by Lees."

Write us. We'll tell you where to find them.

BOOKWORM'S BOUTIQUE

Eighteen suggestions you might add to your Christmas list

Just for Christmas

Once Upon a Christmas Time by Thyra Ferré Bjorn (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., $2.95). A warm and nostalgic story of the Christmas season as it was celebrated in Sweden some fifty years ago. Mrs. Bjorn describes with many details the feasts and celebrations enjoyed with her eight sisters and brothers in their parsonage home and recalls other traditions and folklore of this joyous time of year.

The Story of the Wise Men, according to the Gospel of St. Matthew, with photographs of the Gislebertus sculptures (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., $4.95). A handsome Christmas book with twenty-four gravure plates of the remarkable series of sculptures in which the twelfth-century master depicted his conception of the Gospel story. The concluding section of the book portrays life in medieval France as recorded by Gislebertus' sculpture, with text by Regine Pernoud.

Re: Art and Artists

Man Through His Art, Volume 1: War and Peace, edited by Mme. Anil de Silva, Prof. Otto von Simson (New York Graphic Society, $7.95). This is the first of a new series of fourteen books, a project of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Professions with some financial help from UNESCO. The series hopes to encourage international understanding and world peace through beautiful reproductions of world masterpieces and skillful essays on the meaning of the works of art. In this first volume, thirtyeight handsome plates-including twenty in color-tell the story of war and peace through the ages from "The Archers of Tassili," a prehistoric rock painting, through Goya's "The Third of May" to Picasso's "Guernica." Book II, titled "Music," is also scheduled for publication this year.

Nocturne. The Art of James Mc-Neill Whistler by Denys Sutton (Lippincott, $7.95). Too much has been written about the man Whistler and his eccentricities rather than his paintings, which have not been evaluated since his star fell from the grace of the art critics about forty years ago. Mr. Sutton, the British critic, has remedied this deficiency in his very readable book. The edition contains sixty-four plates (five of them in color) plus a selection of etchings printed with the text.

Graphic Art of the 18th Century by Jean Adhémar (McGraw-Hill Book Co., $6.95). A fine history, with over 160 illustrations. Many great painters of the period—among them Tiepolo, Fragonard, Hogarth and Goya, as well as less-known specialists — worked also in the graphic arts. M. Adhémar writes most interestingly about the background of the times as well as the works of art presented. He is Curator of the Cabinet des Estampes at the Bibliothéque Nationale, Paris.

Biography and Such

An American Family, the Tafts 1678-1964 by Ishbel Ross (The World Publishing Co., $6.50). A comprehensive account of one of America's first families. The major portion of the book is devoted to the life of William Howard Taft, but the Tafts were a close-knit family and other members along with their exceptional wives and their children are interwoven into the story. Sixteen pages of photographs are included.

Not Under Oath, Recollections and Reflections by John Kieran (Houghton Mifflin Co., $5). A delightful wandering through the years with John Kieran who, despite his great fame as a sports columnist, manages to convey to all his readers his devotion to nature. He knew all the great and near-great in sports, and as a participant in the radio program, "Information Please," met outstanding people in many other fields. His talent for digression in the midst of a story is not only endearing but helps to round out his commentaries. A frankly sentimental journey with many nature notes on the side.

Day's at the Morn by Samuel Chotzinoff (Harper & Row, $5.95). A reminiscence of youth that reads like a novel. The distinguished pianist and former Music Director of NBC has many wonderful moments to recount. Young Sam takes us all over New Yorkgiving music lessons, bribing the usher at the Met or Carnegie Hall for a topmost balcony seat, browsing in Katz's music store, going to college and falling in love. His backstage appearance in Belasco's production of "The Concert" and his agonizing summer wait to learn if his application to be Efrem Zimbalist's accompanist would materialize are only two of the many amusing and exciting experiences he recounts.

For the Children's Hour

Abigayil, the Story of the Cat at the Manger by Rouben Mamoulian (New York Graphic Society, $3.95). Marshall Goodman's drawings will appeal to any cat lover. The famous stage and screen director, who boasts five cats in his household, has produced a reverent, firsthand account of the nativity by Abigavil, a mother cat who lived with her five kittens in the stable at Beth-Aesop: Five Centuries of Illustrated Fables, selected by John J. Mc-Kendry, published by the Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York Graphic Society, $4.95). Aesop's fables have been illustrated more often than any other book except the Bible, and the woodcuts and engravings in this edition date from 1476 to the present. The original Aesop was intended to lead youths into the paths of wisdom and rectitude but, according to Mr. McKendry, Assistant Curator of Prints at the Museum, "the aim of this edition is hardly so lofty; it is simply to make its readers aware of the enormous variety and quantity of the illustrations of the fables." This book might well turn out to be a collector's item.

The Polka Dot Child, written and illustrated by Luciana Roselli (New York Graphic Society, $3.95). A pleasant little fantasy for a small child. Mostly a picture book with a negligible amount of text, it has an almost turn-of-thecentury charm.

Gardeners' Bedtime Reading

On Gardening by Gertrude Jekyll with introduction and selection of passages by Elizabeth Lawrence (Charles Scribner's Sons, $6). Miss Jekyll, the most famous woman garden designer at the turn of the century, makes great good sense in these excerpts from ten of her gardening books which were originally published between 1899 and 1925. Elizabeth Lawrence has pieced the selections together in such a way that this book reads as smoothly as the original ten. It covers all gardening subjects and ends with Miss Jekyll's own special recipe for potpourri.

Social History

A Vanishing America, the Life and Times of the Small Town, introduction by Wallace Stegner (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., $9.95). Twelve distinguished authors have written on twelve widely varying American hamlets and produced a most unusual and very readable book, illustrated with pictures of each town in its flourishing period. A. B. Guthrie's affectionate memories of Choteau, Montana; the formidable amount of history stored in Nacogdoches, Texas, told by John Edward Weems; William O. Douglas' nostalgic account of the growth and development of Forks, Washington, are especially memorable portraits of small-town life.

Edwardian England, 1901-1914, edited and with a preface by Simon Nowell-Smith (Oxford University Press, $15). The intention of this volume is to show how all classes of English citizenry fared during the years immediately preceding World War I. Each chapter has a different author, a specialist in his field such as John Betjeman on architecture, Marghanita Laski on domestic life. Some of the contributors were born in the Edwardian era, but most are students of the times. A well-illustrated book, it deals with every fashion.

Going places, finding things on a Mississippi paddle wheeler

A cruise on the Delta Queen may be short on banjo players, but long on comfort, good food and feet-up sight-seeing

By Mary C. Burke

EDITOR'S NOTE: As Merchandising Editor of H&G, Mary Burke is accustomed to move around the country at jet speed. Here she reports on the anachronistic delights of a more leisurely form of travel, a cruise down the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers by paddle steamer.

Since my first encounter with Gay Ravenal, dashing leading man of the "Cotton Blossom" stock company in Edna Ferber's incomparable "Show Boat," I had yearned to travel on the river. And now here I was in Cincinnati on a raw, snowy March day all set to board the last of the passenger-carrying packet boats, the Delta Queen, pride of the Greene Line. This was the first trip of the season, from Cincinnati to New Orleans and back-a distance of 3,000 miles and the longest pleasure cruise in the world on any river. The round trip would take twenty days, but I was planning to leave the boat when we got to New Orleans.

There would be several stops going down river—Louisville, Memphis, Natchez for the annual Garden Pilgrimage and Confederate Pageant, and Oak Allee, a splendid Greek Revival plantation. We would reach New Orleans for the Easter weekend.

In this day of jetting around the world almost as fast as one can write about it, cruising on a paddle-wheel steamer at a snappy 14 miles an hour (and that only southbound; going up-river against the current is much slower) seemed extremely attractive and guaranteed to soothe a weary spirit. And so it did. (For the benefit of salt-water sailors, speed on the river is measured in miles rather than knots.)

It had been touch-and-go whether the Queen would be able to sail on schedule, as barely a week before the worst flood in twenty years raged on both the Ohio and the Mississippi, leaving great destruction in its wake. Sailing day found the Ohio just below flood stage. By removing the smoke stack whistle and flagpole, the Queen's noble 50-foot height was lowered just enough to give clearance beneath the two bridges we would sail under on leaving Cincinnati. As the pilot eased the boat away from the cobblestone wharf and swung her stern first upstream to turn around, a great cheer went up from a crowd of spectators lining the river bank. We were off-and literally in a cloud of steam as the calliope poured jets of steam skyward.

Lady with a Past

Much has been written about the stern-wheelers that plied the rivers during their heyday in the Eighteen Hundreds. But I doubt if any of the original boats had a more interesting past than the Queen. Built in Glasgow, Scotland in the mid-Nineteen Twenties, then knocked down and shipped to San Francisco to be reconstructed, the Queen and her sister ship, the Delta King, were in service between San Francisco and Sacramento until the early Forties. During World War II, they both served as ferries in San Francisco Bay carrying Navy personnel. After they were "mustered out" of the service, the Coast Guard put them up for sale. The Delta Queen was purchased by the Greene Line in 1946. To buy her was one thing. To get her to Cincinnati was another. Flat-bottomed paddle-wheel boats are not geared for long trips on the open sea, let alone going through the Panama Canal and up the Gulf. The story of towing the Delta Queen 5,000 miles in open water and through the Panama Canal to New Orleans and eventually up the Mississippi to Cincinnati is the subject of a fascinating book, "The Saga of the Delta Queen," by Captain Frederick Way, a well-known river pilot who accompanied the Queen on the long trip from the West Coast to drydock in New Orleans.

What is she like?

According to the travel folders, the Delta Queen is the largest and most luxurious of any stern-wheeler. The boat is air-conditioned (a boon to summer travelers) and has "all the modern conveniences" with one exception: the running water in the cabins is not fit to drink as it comes from the river.

Passengers are warned to fill pitchers from the fountains conveniently located throughout the ship. More than half of us could never remember to do this. It was hilarious to catch a glimpse of coated passengers, pajama legs showing, pretending not to notice one another as they slunk along the decks, pitchers in hand.

The staterooms are simply furnished, but very comfortable and beautifully maintained. Many have private baths. My favorite location, and one which I will book next time, is on the top or sun deck, which affords a marvelous view of the passing scene through the large windows—and there is a new vista around every bend in the broad, swiftly flowing river.

Meals are plentiful, plain and regional-e.g., out of Cincinnati the fare is northern, but as we progressed south, it developed quite a southern accent, and by the time we reached New Orleans, the flavor was definitely Creole. A fairly recent addition to the Queen is a tiny but popular bar-the Mark Twain-presided over by surely the best drink mixer in the United States. His pale gold, extradry Manhattans served in perfectly chilled glasses with a thin twist of lemon peel would have brought a grateful tear to my Father's eyes. The Martini drinkers were equally ecstatic

PATIO

Here you see the epitome of modern informal ware from America's oldest and largest glass works devoted exclusively to hand-blowing fine lead crystal in the ancient manner. Patio is blown into a mold depicting fruit and flowers in a deliciously primitive design. Two other pieces—a dessert dish and juice glass are available in addition to the iced tea, water and old-fashioned glasses shown at the left. Patio may be yours in a range of five very smart colors.

ANTIQUE JELLY GLASSES

Late in the last century, great-grandmother Bryce asked the factory to produce glasses like these for her own use in putting up jellies and jams. Now they have been resurrected, much to the delight of those who treasure fine crystal of ancient lineage. You may buy Bryce's Antique Jelly Glasses in the highball and single or double old-fashioned shapes shown at the right in ruby, deep blue, amber or clear crystal. Look for them at your favorite fine glassware department or write to Bryce for the name of the dealer nearest you.

TURKEY EAGLE

These delightful Americana conversation pieces in highball and double or single old-fashioned shapes will add zest to any gathering. Each bears a dusk-colored glass seal bearing the imprint of a rare bird with turkey head and eagle body as it appeared briefly in early American decor. It may have resulted from the controversy over our choice of a national symbol. Ben Franklin favored the turkey, others the bald eagle. The Bryce hybrid is copied from one which appears carved in wood in an eastern museum, circa 1800. After you buy these glasses, heed this note of caution: If the turkey screams, stop drinking!

salon becomes the social center. There is music for dancing; the usual windup of a snappy evening is a snack or sandwich eaten in the pantry where trays of "makings" are ready for hungry night-owls.

Who travels on the river boats?

The passengers were a mixed bag, all ages and many professions. There were a number of children -the youngest 6 years old, several children in the 10 to 12 group and a few teen-agers. They were all so well-behaved no one was ever uncomfortably conscious that there were children on board. The crew are wonderful with children, letting them "help," showing them how to fish from the decks, bringing them to the wheelhouse to see how the boat is run. Grownups are invited to the wheelhouse, too, and an invitation at night is highly prized. It is fascinating to stand in the pitch-black room lighted only by the red eye of the compass light, watching the huge searchlight pick out markers along the river bank while the pilot smokes his pipe and spins a yarn or two.

The repeaters on the Queen are legion. It is quite common to have veterans of two, three or even four trips return. No one gets boatsick on a stern-wheeler. There is no motion, no rocking, rolling or pitching—which makes for a comfortable trip, and a safe one for older passengers.

Scenic "firsts"

Everything along the river was news to me. The locks, engineering marvels which I will never understand, are thrilling. Because of the barely receding flood conditions, we looked down on the first lock. It was night, quite foggy and wonderfully eerie. We leaned over the rail listening to the captain, pilot and crew swapping news and gossip with the lock master whom they had not seen since the fall before. The locks work automatically these days and in a very short time we were on our way.

As the trip progressed, I thought how much of the country we miss by driving or flying or riding trains. You really feel close to things on the river. It was fun to note the states change, too. One morning we had Missouri on our right and Kentucky on our left. Before noon, Arkansas pre-empted the right side with Tennessee on the left.

Going ashore

As on any cruise, the passengers look forward to the stops, but at Continued on page 48

the end of a shore stay, bone-weary sight-seers are happy to return "home." The Louisville stop was not scenic-we tied up for a few hours at an oil dock for fuel. We made an unscheduled stop at Paducah, the purpose of which according to ship gossip was to pick up laundry left on the last northbound trip the autumn before. I liked the idea so much I didn't check it out. The Queen's arrival at all stops is announced by the calliope, which gives her friends along the river a chance to get down to see her-and they come in droves, particularly during the first trip of the season. The landbound visitors are welcome to come aboard whenever the Queen is tied up (she is usually tied to a handy tree).

Most of the women welcomed the hours in Memphis, as fog, rain and general dampness hadn't helped hair-do's. I was also determined to visit Julius Goodman & Sons, a 100-year-old silver firm internationally known as a reliable source for out-of-stock patterns as well as for antique silver. There I succumbed to a charming Edwardian fish and fruit service with pearl handles embellished with silver and handsomely chased, slightly curved silver blades.

An overnight stop at historic Natchez allowed time to see the annual Confederate Pageant, a highlight of the annual Garden Club Pilgrimage. The performance is beautifully costumed and staged. Many of the principals have grown up in the Pageant, starting as page boys and flower girls and progressing through the years until they have featured roles. During the annual Pilgrimage, which lasts a month, the great ante-bellum homes are open for inspection. Many of the houses are lived in by descendants of the original owners. The miles of cultivated boxwood hedges and masses of blooming azaleas and camellias are breath-taking. My favorite landmark en route to New Orleans was the magnificent Oak Allee plantation in Louisiana. Built in 1830 by Jacques Roman, whose brother was twice governor of the state, the majestic three-story house is 70 feet square with 16inch walls of weathered pink-plastered brick. Twenty-eight Doric columns surround the house set back 300 feet from the river's edge. You approach under a canopy of twenty-eight live oaks (one for each column), each 15 to 22 feet in circumference. The trees were planted more than 180 years ago. If the perfect proportions of the house and the majesty of the oak canopy were not dazzling enough, the spill of pale lavender wisteria in full bloom down one wall would impress anyone.

Now we were barely 50 miles from New Orleans. On a beautiful clear afternoon we sailed into the harbor, welcomed by the tooting whistles of all craft we passedeverything from a scow to an outbound ocean liner. With great good luck, the Queen was directed by the port captain to tie up at the Toulouse Street Wharf, which meant we were at the edge of the French Quarter. The city was jammed with Easter weekend visitors. I hadn't been to New Orleans for several years so it was fun renewing acquaintance with some of my favorite restaurants and trying a few new ones. The Quarter is full of art galleries, many of them bad, but a few interesting. At Gallery 331, on Chartres Street, I bought a delightful old Haitian wood carving of the Virgin, also a stunning antique Indian kettle in the shape of a Brahma bull in heavy copper with exquisitely detailed seaming in chased brass.

On Royal Street there is a tiny perfume shop, René's, where I found dried vetiver root (delicious scent for linen closets), and cologne, both modestly priced. A new wax museum on Rue Conti depicts three centuries of New Orleans history in thirty authentic settings plus one extra one for lagniappe.

It was fun to ride the streetcars, too. I boarded the Canal Street line (now extinct) near the wharf and rode to the end of the line and back, then boarded the line which still runs through the Garden District.

I loved the inexpensive jazz concerts where you pay as little as 50 cents for a seat on a hard bench. There is no refreshment, but the music is great and jazz buffs can endure several sets before paralysis sets in. These concerts are more fun than the more publicized jazz spots where prices are higher.

Suddenly it was Monday and my adventure was at an end. As I saw the Queen off, the calliope was playing madly, the round-trip passengers were shouting messages to me and the passengers who boarded in New Orleans were looking hopeful. But I felt rather sad. It had been a lovely trip.

Sifts as fabulous as the roc

Once or twice in a lifetime, perhaps, it is possible to give a gift so wonderful that its cost seems almost irrelevant. Here are three such gifts—each expensive, each perfect in its way. Two are totally practical; one is a salute to a chess player who is also a Sybarite. And all of them, should they seem too munificent as gestures, can justify as gifts for home and family.

Princely table-desk, hand-wrought of steel and brass in the Louis XVI manner with a red or black leather top, ormolu edging and three suede-lined drawers—one equipped as a combination safe. 58 inches long. At John Vesey, through decorators.

Nabob's chess table upholstered, legs and all, in tortoise-shell-patterned leather. Or you can order it in any size or covering you fancy. With it, an antique English chess set, circa 1820, of exquisitely carved wood. The table, 20 inches high, at Karl Springer, $220 exp. coll. Chessmen. Carlebach Galleries, $420.

Outrageously comfortable hand-tufted leather armchair with a swivel base (or legs, if you prefer). The stainless-steel and leather ottoman can double as a backrest. Both designed by Ward Bennett. At Brickel/Eppinger, through decorators.

House Beautiful Curtains...

319 Fifth Avenue New York 16, New York Both a toy and a quick-change artist, THE BOX is as full of surprises as Pandora's - but more fun

Children, like cats, like nothing better than something they can get into and play make-believe. That is what THE BOX is for. A lidless hideaway 26 inches long with a bottom and four sides-each a different color-it is also a tweaker of young creative instincts: It can be "dressed up" with cardboard cutouts to become, among other things, a train, a clown, a horse or a house. Of Masonite, THE BOX arrives knocked down, complete with instructions for simple tongue-and-groove assembly.

The train: cutout cowcatcher, smokestack, cab and wheels either fit into grooves or over tongues to turn the box into a firedrake of a locomotive.

MIEHLMANN

The house: a gabled roof with trompe-l'oeil version of dormer window slips over two tongues to build a fine one-man clubhouse for a rainy day.

The clown: a starry-eyed head, gloved hands and little feet do the trick here to produce just the place to curl up and have a good laugh.

The horse: Old Dobbin was never quite so square in the brisket, but he makes a handsome hideaway for any child who can fold himself into 26 inches. THE BOX, by Playtime Interiors, $10 exp. coll., at Frank Lawrence.

Don't buy one unless you like people.

Take heed. We know one Conn Organ buyer who had to wait in line to sit at his own keyboard. Family, friends and neighbors simply cannot resist playing the Conn. So, accept that fact and go joyously on from there!

The start is easy. Thanks to Conn's new learning method, "Instant Music," you can play any one of 39 popular songs in a matter of minutes. No endless scales and tiresome exercises. If you know your alphabet from "A" to "G," you can play both keyboards, with exciting band effects, and with foot pedals, too.

You play naturally-with true human expression. No gimmicks or gadgets. This is a professional-quality instrument created by C. G. Conn, Ltd., world's largest maker of band instruments. The Conn has such tonal versatility, such musical potential, you will never outgrow it no matter how skilled you become.

There are nine beautifully-crafted models, starting from $995. Your Conn dealer can arrange easy payments. But remember-don't buy one unless you like people!

Power tools to give for Christmas

As a Christmas gift, a power tool has a three-pronged appeal. First, the satisfaction-pleasure, if you like-that comes from using it. Second, the practical help it gives a man when he has to tackle a building or fixing project. And third, the fact that the gift is a compliment to his present or potential skill. The selection below and opposite page starts with fairly simple tools for a reasonably dexterous tyro and progresses to more advanced equipment for the man who really knows what he's doing. (In either case, it might do well to suggest a little practice to get the feel of the tool before plunging into a project.) If the man you have in mind is planning to finish a summer house or work on a boat, you might consider one of the many, newly developed cordless power tools that run on batteries.

Power drill kit makes a good first power tool. Its main function is to drill holes in walls to hang pictures, shelf brackets, mirrors and the like. Powerful motor replaces laborious hand drilling, works quickly on plaster, plasterboard, plywood, lumber, plastic, etc. Stanley Power Tools. 1/4-inch-drill-size kit, $33. 3/4-inch-drill-size, $45.

Utility sander is designed for easy, one-hand control when smoothing or finishing wood, plastic or even metal surfaces. Can be used on walls or ceilings and has a convenient thumb-tip on-off switch for accurate handling. Tool can be equipped with a dust-collecting attachment to reduce mess while working. Black & Decker. $20.

THIS IS THE STORY OF THE 36 LOST MASTERPIECES!

Imagine, if you can, finding several thousand sets of reproductions of the world's greatest paintings that were lost for more than 25 years! It actually happened... and this is the true story of the discovery of that lost treasure: Back in 1937, immediately following the depression years, a voluntary national committee for art appreciation was formed to create an art program that would give the public a well-needed morale lift. It was the committee's decision to reproduce, as perfectly as humanly possible, a collection of the world's greatest art masterpieces and make them available to the public at a price within the reach of nearly everyone. A select group of a dozen nationally prominent people selected what—in their opinion—were the best paintings of Matisse, of Van Gogh, Renoir, etc. Over $1,000,000 was spent on this art project and 3,000,000 prints were made.

For some unknown reason, after a quantity of beautiful reproductions were made the entire project was abandoned and this collection of reproductions was stored in a Brooklyn warehouse, where they remained, undisturbed for over 25 years.

Even with a brief inspection, we realize that we have found an outstanding value.

Making full color photographs of the original paintings was the least difficult part of the job. The masterpieces had to be reproduced through the most modern techniques of the day. Original glass plates were produced, and it was found that at least 6 different colors for each painting would have to be provided and, in most cases, it was necessary to print with 8, 9, and even 10 different colors in order to bring out the full realistic true fidelity of each masterpiece.

When these prints were recently "rediscovered," leading lithographers and art critics unanimously agreed that they had never seen such true fidelity in color printing. They were most impressed by the fact that these lovely masterpieces still held their marvelous original colors even after those many years. The prints in this folder are from the original collection!

What makes these reproductions so unique is the fact that they are literally collectors items, for when they are gone it will be impossible to reproduce prints of comparable quality. Although the glass plates still exist, the conclusion and judgment of lithographers is that it would not be economically feasible to use those plates to print additional reproductions.

THE DAY I DISCOVERED

"There I was-in my kitchen thinking about how hard it was to set an original holiday table. Swamped with house-holdy things to do. Hoping to impress guests who don't impress easily. I was just digging my fingernails into the hard-white of the kitchen table when there was a knock at the back door.

"It was Ronald-and I hadn't even combed my hair. There he stood with a large, mysterious package. He kissed me and I remembered that awful scratch I'd made on the kitchen table and how his overcoat had a fresh holiday smell.

'Together we opened his gift. The crinkly wrapping had an odor that mixed well with the air coming from my half-opened kitchen door.

"And then, for the first time, I saw a Jordan's ham. All cooked. Glazed-over with brown sugar and ready-to-serve. I returned his kiss-backing subtly toward the warm oven.

That evening's holiday table was a gourmet-banquet. And he was there and all our friends-and Jordan's ham was kingof-the-table. It's steeped in wine, hickory flavor was a rich compliment to our guests and to me.

"Now holiday time means Jordan's at our house. And when I order a gift-that means Jordan's, too. You should try it."

For your holiday treat and for the friends you value most, order magnificent Jordan's hams. These choicest of all hams have a sweet nutlike flavor that comes from weeks of smoking over hickory fires, followed by long slow aging for almost a year. Beautifully packaged, your Jordan's ham arrives fully cooked, ready to serve. Satisfaction guaranteed on this gourmet holiday treat. Order your Jordan's hams now from this year's limited edition.

The Art of SCRIMSHAW

... developed on the rolling ships of old New Bedford has almost disappeared. Only a few men still follow in the footsteps of the seamen who painstakingly and with great delicacy engraved the ivory from the whales they caught.

Our work is done in this ancient tradi-tion, on genuine ivory and entirely by hand.

The decoration on each piece we show is an old whaling ship. Links and mountings are heavily gold-plated. The ultimate gift for those you particularly wish to please.

NEW! A way to make your carpet feel an inch thick and last longer

Double Cushion-a new kind of carpet cushion by B.F.Goodrich

Sink into the first carpet cushion ever to bring you both firm support and a deep, springy feel. Now your carpet can literally float on two cushions of air, because new Double Cushion puts two lively layers of sponge rubber under your carpet instead of just one. The top layer is flat to give firm support for high heels and heavy furniture. This layer, and a tough, fibrous backing material underneath it, take a lot of the pounding that your carpet used to.

The bottom layer is rippled for deep-down softness and resilience. Double Cushion is also guaranteed against defects in workmanship and material without time limit—or we replace it without charge.* Just step on new Double Cushion at your dealer's and see how plush it feels. We think you'll agree that the difference in luxury and longer wear are worth much more than the small difference in price. Ask for it. New B.F.Goodrich Double Cushion.

*Should such defects appear as a result of normal use, B.F.Goodrich will, at no charge, provide sufficient material and labor to replace such defective cushion.

Fine carpeting deserves Double Cushion...less expensive carpeting needs it

Stratford

"Perfect design, perfect fabric, perfect tailoring...flawless at every seam," said she. "How much?" he asked. "Less than you or anyone will ever guess," she replied.

The secret lies in Stratford's unique ability to produce in volume what traditionally costs much more to achieve by hand. Stratford sofas and chairs compare to furniture selling for 25% to 30% more. Whether you choose Stratford Traditional, Early American, Contemporary or Provincial, a home with Stratford speaks a thousand prideful words about your good taste.

SHOWN: sofa from $189 to $249; swivel-rocker from $99 to $119; chair and ottoman from $129 to $169.

Here's our famous little bar board. Here's our bigger new buffet board. What comes next? Smorgasbord.

The Dansk buffet board is just the right size for serving up a nice hunk of cheese. Or slicing a block of pate de foie gras. Or cutting a particularly lush tomato paper-thin.

And it works just as beautifully in this bigger version. Jens Quistgaard built it of the same end-grain blocks that make a butcher block so sturdy. But he chose Siamese teak, the shipbuilder's wood, to make it water-resistant. And hand-somer than a parquet floor.

Note the concave top. That's to catch the juice of the tomato. The other side's flat for cutting cheeses, rolls, giant Bermuda onions.

The buffet knife is made of the same tough Finnish steel that slices through winter seas for their ice-breaker fleet. Its in-board scabbard has a nylon bushing to keep the knife snug, safe, sharp.

That's why a Dansk buffet board can put in a five-day week in your kitchen and be in great shape for parties every weekend. It's made to take it.

So take it. And give it. All this talent is just $12.95. And in case you don't yet own the little bar board, that small wonder is $7.95.

beauty is pleasure"

Beauty, we are told, is in the eye of the beholder. But your eye having registered the presence of beauty, what then? Do you weigh and measure it, hoard it, share it, or simply check it off and go about your business?

To some people, beauty is a matter for judgment. Their taste appears impeccable, their discrimination lethally sharp. They look at every object in the world around them and tell you precisely and with intimidating authority which is ugly, which is beautiful and why. But when one day you are honored with an invitation to their home, you are perplexed, disillusioned, possibly appalled. The beauty you had been led to expect is inexplicably absent. These arbiters, it appears, can take their beauty or leave it.

To others, beauty is something to be possessed. Blessed with lusty pocketbooks, they buy and buy. Their china cupboards and their linen closets are crammed with beautiful objects, excellent of design, luxurious of material, marked by superb crafts-manship. When you visit their houses, you may be permitted to admire their newest acquisitions. But if you ask for a drink of water, it comes in a glass that looks for all the world as if it once held jam. The family dinner table is set, as if by automation, with nondescript knives, forks and dishes that shuttle endlessly from dishwasher to table and back. When someone in the family wants a snack, he eats it out of hand, out of the package, out of the cupboard. Meanwhile the hand-carved trays rest undisturbed in their cubbyholes and the silver sleeps on in its nontarnish wraps.

Of quite a different breed are those who believe with George Santayana that "beauty is pleasure, regarded as the quality of a thing." For them, beauty is to be enjoyed, beautiful objects to be used. In their houses there is no best nor second best. Grandmother's Spode is just as likely to turn up on the family breakfast table as at a dinner party. A sparkling crystal goblet brings the bedtime ration of milk. Bright zinnias in a silver cup deck the luncheon-for-one tray—the bathroom counter, too. And the towel racks are crowded with colors that say someone had a good time putting them there.

Household slaves? Courters of disaster? Wasters of substance? Hardly. For these are the people who have long since discovered that the real threat to beauty's fragility comes not from modern labor-savors, but (today as always) from human carelessness. And the beautiful things they use with joy they equally enjoy handling with care.

To such people, hospitality comes easy. To give pleasure to their guests, they have no need to put on a show; they have only to share. They know that the true spirit of hospitality, like the spirit of love and charity, starts with being hospitable to yourself.

Engaging rooms that say welcome

he first essential of a welcoming room is a welcoming hostess, her face wreathed in a cordial smile. But the magic that transfuses her welcoming spirit into the palpable surroundings is more elusive, a subtle concoction of means ranging from the basic furnishings to the small, deft, last-minute touch.

Color, to begin with, is vital—not blasts of color, but a well-organized play of hues, brilliant or muted, that makes a positive impression, engenders immediate delight. Comfortable chairs to sit in, delightful although not necessarily museum-quality paintings to look at, an unpredictable assortment of possessions to examine—all these make you want to linger. Another crucial element is the quality of the light. Overhead illumination that produces a harsh, all-too-revealing glare undermines anyone's aplomb, whereas the gentle flattery of softly suffused side lights or candlelight is warmly reassuring. Tiny Christmas tree lights adroitly tucked behind valance boards or tall plants can fill a room with twinkling cheer.

Flowers, of course, help immeasurably to weave the welcoming spell—real flowers, hopefully, otherwise vivid blossoms of paper or silk along with leafy growing plants. Rooms that smell scrubbed, waxed, fragrant and altogether immaculate imply that you were expected and that somebody really cared. And a crackling fire, unsurpassable for summoning the spirit of welcome at a moment's notice, is impossible to resist. Emerson, in fact, believed that "hospitality consists of a little fire"; and Thomas Jefferson once declared, "The happiness of the domestic fireside is the first boon of mankind."

On the next seven pages is a series of rooms remarkable for the compelling warmth of the invitation they express. For the perceptive people who live in them have availed themselves of a large and tremendously varied bag of tricks with which to beguile their guests into feeling comfortable, secure, enchanted and, most important of all, at home.

"When I moved East, I wanted one intimate room that would suggest the spirit of outdoor California." Lively color and the spontaneous look of a field flower bouquet welcome the guests that Mrs. Doris Vidor likes to invite in two's and three's for luncheon, tea or intimate dinners in the study of her New York apartment. Yet the apparent spontaneity is the result of artful planning: the printed linen curtains and upholstery and the flower-wreathed rug were carefully chosen to complement the hues of the vivid Tamayo painting over the dining table and the Vuillard over the marble-topped console. The bamboo-turned chairs and glass-topped wrought-iron table are in key with the informal uses of the room which was designed to be an intimate haven in a large and imposing apartment. But classic French moldings (finished in two tones to give extra depth) sustain a quiet obbligato of elegance. Interior design by Renny B. Saltzman.

"Where we sit depends on the number of guests we happen to be entertaining at the moment."

The Philip Geyelins' new garden room-which actually does open on their garden-has become the real capitol of their Washington house. It serves as an informal dining room where the four Geyelin children and their many friends can also enjoy games, guitar playing and records, and it houses files for Mr. Geyelin who reports on foreign affairs for the Wall Street Journal. Mrs. Geyelin, a decorator with Alan B. Cox Associates, designed the room with characteristic ingenuity, combining homely and primitive objects "made lovingly and with integrity"-like the pine table-with a French bergère covered in needlepoint, American Federal chairs and a do-it-yourself tea table composed of a marble top and an old base sprayed with gilt.

a carpeted conversation pit with comfortable built-in sofas draws party guests irresistibly toward the hearth of the William M. Lesters' dramatic living room in Livingston, N. J. But when the Lesters are entertaining only one or two intimate friends, they are just as likely to sit around the marble-topped table on the upper level where the jewel-tone rug covering the floor of old paving blocks seems to create a separate room. By using color, a variation of level and contrasting floor coverings, the Lesters have countered the vastness of the big room, yet taken advantage of its spaciousness. Painting is by Pierre Soulages (Kootz Gallery). Interior design by Audré Fiber.

the mellow tones of old wood haloed by the gleam of crystal and silver leaf and the sparkling whiteness of sheer silk curtains entice the Reed Johnstons' guests into the dining room with no loitering. When the family moved from a house into a newly built apartment, they were eager to maintain their long-established pattern of entertaining in a traditional ambiance—a goal that was astutely achieved by the discriminating choice of very elegant materials handled with the utmost simplicity. Interior design by Alexandra Gignoux, Inc.

"I like to move my flowers around a room shouldn't look the same all the time." a marvelous potpourri of mementos from the years when Senator John Sherman Cooper was Ambassador to India beguiles visitors to the Coopers' house in Georgetown, D. C. With an artist's hand, Mrs. Cooper has mixed Victorian needlepoint, English porcelains, French carvings, a pair of Indian chairs and Indian ceremonial lamps (flanking fireplace) to create a backdrop for parties that range from Monday at-homes to formal dinners for twenty-four. Important to the scheme are bouquets of flowers, real or paper, always colorful. For larger parties, the doors of the room are thrown open to the adjacent library. One inflexible rule: No more guests than seats.

"We wanted one big room to use in pieces for ourselves, or as a whole when we entertain." the bold and imaginative background of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Woerner's dining room and the amply proportioned French furniture combine to create a lively atmosphere for entertaining pervaded by overtones of bountiful well-being. This is the amenable type of room that changes character with a change of table settings; from citified elegance to the country informality favored by the Woerners' sons and their college friends. The walls are covered with Peruvian linen striped and banded with bright tape. Interior design by Audré Fiber.

Comfort, color, paintings and a panoramic view of New York's East River beckon visitors into Mr. and Mrs. David Simon's living room. The Simons wanted a room that could be intimate when they were alone, or hospitable on a handsome scale when they gave parties that revolved around music. They also welcome an occasional overnight guest. So they turned three separate rooms into an all-in-one living, dining, music and guest room, preserving a hint of demarcation by a variation of floor level. The walnut panel at the left opens out to reveal a comfortable bed. The dining area is on a second platform at the other end of the room. At night, the whole room glows with light from hidden sources: strip lighting along bases of the platforms and posts of the bookshelves. Interior designer, Virginia Whitmore Kelly.

ONE GREAT PARTY

WITH ENOUGH IDEAS TO SPARK A DOZEN

To mark the entrance, a torch-lighted banner.

The party starts: Mr. and Mrs. Jack Baker, son Daniel and daughter Liza, greet guests.

PHOTOGRAPHS BY MAX ECKERT

"We aim to make each party individual," say the Jack Bakers, "with different decorations and different food, so that it's a new experience for everyone—something that's a treat." A couple with talent and imagination who live in Santa Barbara, Calif., the Bakers usually plan a party—as distinct from having a few friends come in for cocktails or dinner—for an occasion, someone's birthday, perhaps, or a visit from an out-of-town museum director. The somewhat unorthodox inspiration for their last party was their own impending departure for a three-month trip around the world. With all the business of getting themselves and their three young children ready for such a trip, they reasoned, it would be more fun and less frantic to invite all their friends to one big party rather than attempt to fit into an already hectic schedule the score of individual parties which many of their friends had suggested giving for them.

In the family division of labor the party decorations are the province of the host. Mr. Baker, a painter with a rapidly growing following and an art instructor in the Santa Barbara high school, has firm ideas on the subject. "I think that any decorations, particularly when you have more than twenty people, have to be overscale. You've got to go big and you've got to go high and you've got to hit hard, if they are going to be seen over the milling crowd." He gets his big effects with color, size and simple materials like paint, paper, felt and fabric scraps. For the bon-voyage party, even the invitations were overscale: tissue-paper collage folios roughly the size of a telephone book. In fact, one of the recipients, Dame Judith Anderson, promptly put hers to use as a cover for her telephone book. The principal decorations, however, were a block of brilliant banners made of felt, fabric cutouts and cotton yarn that stood over 7 feet tall. An enormous banner marked the hard-to-find turn to the driveway, and the guests made their entrance through an S-curve of banners lining the walk and terrace.

Asked about the time required to make so many banners, Mr. Baker confessed to a secret weapon: his students. "My parties have a tendency to turn into class projects." And the projects demonstrate his belief that arts and crafts should be a part of life, to be used and lived with, to serve you and to be shared with others. Students made all the banners for the bon-voyage party, except for the one he made as an example, and they made the dining room tablecloth. In addition, several of them made decorations at home and brought them as gifts—papier-mâché birds, an elaborate papier-mâché compote which the Bakers piled with cookies, butterflies for the flower arrangements. At five o'clock on the evening of the party, when the decorations were in place, all the students were asked to come and see how their work had been used. (Continued)

Dramatic buffet on the terrace: Table was covered in hot-pink felt, striped with a magenta rebozo, flanked by banners and backed by a papier-mâché horse Mr. Baker made to display Ethiopian harness trappings. Ethiopian carved wood bowls contained curry, rice, condiments; wood compote held a composition of fruit, vigil lights, eatable slices of melon, pineapple. In lacquer bowls on small table, more condiments.

HE WHOLE HOUSE IS PUT ON PARTY ALERT

The whole house had been dressed up for the party by a combination of means: brilliant color in paint and fabric, Mr. Baker's own colorful paintings and dramatically arranged selections from the large collection of folk arts and crafts that he and his wife have acquired on their travels. He is completely uninhibited about making any change in the house that he feels will contribute to the mood of the party or the comfort of his guests. He rearranges, moves out or repaints furniture (most of it inexpensive, amusing pieces that he painted himself to begin with) and, in fact, repaints any part of the house, inside or out. He enjoys doing this, says it is one of the advantages of living in an old house. He never wants to own a new one-it might inhibit him. For the bon-voyage party, he repainted the inside of the shelves at one end of the living room from pale lavender to red and filled them with folk art, hung brilliantly striped canvas over the window above, put bright felt covers on the two round tables, repainted the interior of the freestanding desk to match the magenta cloth on the table next to it and covered the wall next to the door with bright pink felt to set off a collection of Ethiopian baskets which were filled with a variety of cocktail nibbles. On one wall of the dining room, he massed a collection of Thai spirit houses and filled them with gaily colored vigil lights. Finally, at strategic spots, he placed overscale bouquets, real, artificial or both.

1. To key their cheerful living room to party pitch, the Bakers massed blazing color on one wall. They repainted the shelves red and filled them with colorful folk-art objects, hung bright striped canvas on the window between the paintings, put a lavender felt cloth on the table and a gay Oaxaca church on a yellow pedestal under the window. The final touch: massed flowers, real and fake.

2. In one corner of the terrace an Ethiopian woven wicker table and chairs provided cocktail hour seating for wandering guests. Terrace planting by Santa Barbara landscape designer Turk Hessellund.

3. Poised on paper-covered pedestals against a magenta wall, Ethiopian breadbaskets looked like an exotic village and offered an assortment of cocktail tidbits.

4. Before the start of the party Mr. and Mrs. Baker moved the principal party decorations—fanciful, colorful felt and fabric banners—into place on the entrance path and terrace. Imagine how effectively banners like these could transform a hard-to-decorate ballroom or clubbonse.

5. Among the guests who brought their drinks out to the terrace, Mrs. Earl Harmonson wore a coat that rivaled the banners in brilliance.

6. Bowls of outsized paper flowers, each nearly a foot in diameter, stopped dress designer Suzi Brewster Duff and her escort, Brad Fuller,

7. Party dress for the entrance hall: papier-mâché fruit twined up the newel post, paper flowers covering the glass transom over the front door, big blue colander of daisies beneath one of Mr. Baker's own paintings.

8. Hung unexpectedly on the back of the desk in the living room was another of Mr. Baker's paintings. On the floor, Liza and Kitchie Baker sampling for themselves some crackers they had been passing to guests.

Kitchie Baker, dressed in her special party costume, offering crackers to Mrs. John Mershon.

In front of candlelit Thai spirit houses, Mrs. Harry Carey, William P. R. Smith, The Jack Warners.

In a corner of the dining room, Dame Judith Anderson, Wright Ludington, Mrs. Earl Harmonson. Below, serving themselves from buffet, Mrs. Hamilton Von Breton and Mrs. William P. R. Smith.

OOD IS SERVED WITH A FLOURISH

The food is Mrs. Baker's department, and her menu—East African curry with rice and a score of condiments, followed by tangerine ice—illustrated her theories about party food. She feels that the food should be interesting, but not involve a lot of last-minute work; that the menu should be simple, the quantity abundant—"for a party, I want to have plenty, more than is necessary"—and the presentation dramatic. Even the simplest dessert, for example, served in a pretty container and garnished with fragrant lemon blossoms, becomes exciting party fare. She does the cooking herself, but with more than ten or fifteen guests, she engages waitresses to help with the serving and clearing up. She also has the willing if inexpert help of her two daughters—Liza, 7 and Kitchie, 4—which she considers good training for them even if it slows her down. When the guests arrive, the girls, dressed in special costumes—for this party, white tights, black dresses and big white collars—greet them and pass canapés. The Baker's 12-year-old son, Daniel, always acts as assistant host to his father, and also sees that his gregarious little sisters get to bed on time.

After guests at the bon-voyage party had served themselves from the buffet—set up on the terrace near the kitchen door—they sat down to eat at the dining room table or at small tables in the living room. Mrs. Baker had set up the latter at the last minute just as the guests headed for the buffet. Each of the tables was different in color and appointments. The Bakers have too many likes to have one service of china for a large number. "But we do try to buy in eights," they say, and they plan the tables to take advantage of the variety.

Their guests—about thirty of them—contributed their own share of color and variety to the proceedings: most of the women wore dresses in colors that looked as if they had been designed to go with the decorations. According to the Bakers this usually happens at their parties. "Most of the people who come here know how we do things. They try to anticipate what the evening is going to be and dress accordingly. Once, when everybody knew the party was for an Indian artist, they all came in saris or dresses made from saris." With this kind of spirit, party failure is almost an impossibility.

"Sometimes," said Mr. Baker, "I think we make too much of a production of our parties. But we have such fun preparing for them that the party itself is almost incidental." You would not be likely to find a guest, however, who would agree.

For details on how the invitation, banners and tablecloth were made, see page 291.

OPPOSITE PACE

A trio of tables, no two alike, each gay enough to sustain a party by itself, presented competing lures to guests coming laden from the buffet. The large oval dining table, top, was covered with a white felt cloth thickly strewn with multicolored felt flowers and crowned with a centerpiece consisting of a cluster of white apothecary jars containing different kinds of flowers in tight bunches. At each place, blue and green glasses, white Corning "Centura" plates and—an enchanting Baker touch—an individual carafe of white wine, corked with a carnation, Each of the small tables in the living room, below, was set in a different color scheme. And on each table, the dessert (tangerine ice garnished with lemon blossoms) was presented in a different way: right, in lacquer bowls on yellow plates (to note the outsize yukata cloth napkins); far right, in double glasses (usually used for seafood cocktails) on Mexican tin plates. Rainbow-hued vigil lights were made by wrapping clear glass containers with colored gelatin. On all tables, Gense's "Ultima" stainless steel flatware.

Christmas according to a few spoilsports is a child's world-a tenet held with no regard at all for children who have lived to be 80-odd years old and still look forward to Christmas with the same joy that possessed them when they were 8. So, for the young and the young in heart, H&G once again presents its annual parade of gifts. These first two pages are devoted to the tender gamut that runs from tots to teen-agers. The art of vvelcoming few years ago a cousin of mine confided that the first French girl he had ever met swept him off his feet. Since then, France has always been for him a country of wonder, of romance and of small brunettes. I remembered this at my first United Nations dinner party. Since I had never been to the country of my dinner partner, the gallant Ambassador did not merely come from Ecuador, for me he was Ecuador—just as for him I probably represented a good deal more than my fair share of American womanhood. It made me realize that so often the image of America abroad is created not only by statesmen and by events, but by all the Americans whom foreigners meet.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Ronald Tree, left, U. S. Representative on the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, was admired as a warm and considerate hostess long before her appointment by President Kennedy to her present post. In view of the increasing numbers of foreign visitors to the U. S., H&G has asked Mrs. Tree to clear up some of the perplexities that often beset Americans when they want to make guests from other lands and other cultures feel at home.

In Hebrews (XIII) it is written "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." Happily for Americans, hospitality is an old and powerful tradition in our country. It grew not out of charity, but necessity. For the pioneers living in isolated frontier settlements, a visitor was a source of help against common dangers, and of news of the world beyond their horizons. Although our foreign visitors no longer come in sailing ships or covered wagons, they travel not merely hundreds, but thousands, of miles, and they come at great cost, for travel is still relatively more expensive for foreigners than for us.

The United States is a vast and bewildering continent. There are almost no facilities for the foreign guest—information centers, scheduled tours and multilingual hotel clerks—such as Americans take for granted abroad. If the visitor speaks no English, our big cities, including cosmopolitan New York, might well seem to be glass and concrete wildernesses. During my first few weeks at the United Nations, a French-speaking diplomat telephoned me an hour after the luncheon I was giving for him had begun. "I'm extremely sorry," he said, "but I tried to take the subway."

"Where are you?" I asked.

"Flatbush," he answered hopelessly. "I've been riding for hours."

After that, I made Resolution Number One about entertaining foreigners: Be certain that your guests know where you live and that they have a foolproof means of transportation to your door. If you can't pick them up yourself, give them very precise directions. The white-house-just-off-that-big-highway-you'll-see school of description just won't do.

In Asia, Africa and Latin America, entertaining is casual. If you ask a recently arrived Ghanaian for dinner at 7:00, he may well turn up at 10:30 with his children and a cousin or two. But by outlining the program of the evening to him ahead of time, you can avoid hurt feelings on either side. In any case, invitations should be as personal as possible—a telephone call followed by a note or card of reminder.

It is a good idea to keep clearly in mind what the purpose of the evening is. Most U.N. parties are given to provide opportunities for the delegates to meet and discuss common problems informally. Sometimes I invite my colleagues to dinner in order to find out about their country or to inform them about a policy decision

our government has taken. At other times I entertain in honor of a visiting foreign dignitary or friend. Whether or not the purpose of the evening is allied to work, small parties are preferable to large ones. Mrs. Roosevelt taught me that small parties make easier a real exchange of ideas and enable the guests to come to know each other better. I've found this is just as true in private entertaining.

Today Americans have a reputation for hospitality for the very simple but significant reason that they invite guests into their homes. In Asia, Africa and even Europe, the home is a sanctuary. It is the most intimate place in the life of the family, and to be taken there is a sign of confidence and friendship. When I have foreign guests, I make it a point to have several members of my family on hand to meet them. The men as well as the women are interested in talking to children—first, because they genuinely like children and second, because it is a means of understanding the basic similarities and differences between the nationalities. Among the most fascinating foreigners I have met were the children from many countries who helped me to do a television program last year for the U.N.

Gradually, by experience, I have learned that in planning parties for foreign visitors there are certain principles-elastic ones, but none the less principles-to be kept in mind. First of all, "foreigners" is not a category like "bridge-players," "lawyers" or "abstract expressionists." Foreigners come in all varieties and they don't necessarily like each other. There is no reason why, for instance, an Argentinian beef baron, a Japanese trades unionist and a Swiss ski champion should get along. When I am abroad, I shrink at the words, "You must know him, he's an American, too." The gentleman I am then introduced to may well turn out to be a Brazilian who speaks only Portuguese. If your guests have a common language, a common profession or common interests, the likelihood of prolonged, chilly silences will be more remote. At U.N. parties, where there are often many language groups represented, hostesses must throw protocol to the winds and seat the Byelorussian delegate next to his aide if there is no other Russian speaker in the room. That is only common sense, since most people are indifferent artists on the tablecloth. Of course, a talent for charades could be an invaluable asset to the lady on the Byelorussian's other side.

Secondly, it is a good idea to choose carefully the Americans you invite to meet your foreign guests. They should be as eager to communicate with your visitors as you are yourself—again, because of a common language, a common profession or common interests. There is no worse feeling for a stranger than that of being talked around.

At her dinner parties Mrs. Roosevelt used to serve the most American of food—corn on the cob, fish chowder, gingerbread with applesauce. Her idea was that you should serve what you cook best rather than a pallid international cuisine or the native dishes of one's foreign guests. At the same time, she thought it a basic courtesy to observe her guests' dietary restrictions. If you are unsure whether your guest is a Hindu, a Moslem or a schismatic Zoroastrian, there is a short rule of thumb: don't serve pork, beef or shellfish. Fish, chicken and lamb are usually safe for any nonvegetarians. I find that foreigners love sweet desserts and/or cheese. Their diets are less strict than ours in this respect. As most foreign women and many foreign men don't drink alcohol, it is well to have a lot of fruit juice on hand.

Once these details are taken care of, the rest should be easy. There will be no problem of what to talk about—or what not to talk about—if you just keep asking questions. Even diplomats have no need to pretend knowledge about their guest's country. The simplest of questions generally elicit the frankest and most interesting answers. I like to ask about my guests' childhood. For example, many of the Africans who come to the United States to work or study are the sons of chiefs who rule their villages according to tribal law. The future of African politics is bound up in the relationship of these Harvard, Oxford and Sorbonne graduates to the traditional backgrounds of their childhood. Most foreigners are delighted to answer any question about their country because to them you are representative of the United States and they are ambassadors from their country to your house.

One caution—watch your American idiom; it may confuse your guests. On the way to the theatre one evening with a party of U.N. delegates I said to the Middle Eastern Ambassador on my left, "Would you give me the time?" "Certainly," he replied. He unstrapped his expensive paper-thin gold watch from his wrist and gave it to me with a smile. My embarrassed apologies were not sufficient to redeem the insult I paid him by "giving back the time."

ost foreigners view the American Female somewhat dubiously. To them we are Thurber women—predatory creatures who dominate our husbands and strike terror into the hearts of strangers with our direct questions and direct stares.
To persuade them that we belong to the feminine species requires a certain circumspection. It is wise for a woman to be a bit formal, for instance, and to avoid using a guest's first name until he has asked her to. On the other hand, there is no need to leave your guests in the Quaker meeting formation they may tend to assume.
Both men and women are flattered and pleased if someone of the opposite sex shows an interest in talking to them.

U.N. delegates and, I am sure, most foreigners who are in this country for a short time also enjoy organized entertainment of the sort which does not depend too heavily on their knowledge of English or of the United States. In general it is better to take them to concerts or musicals rather than to plays. Most of them enjoy events which are peculiar to this country, such as county fairs or Fourth of July parades. Africans and Latin Americans love to dance—either at home or at the newest discothèque.

While organization is good over short periods of time, it should not be insistent and burdensome. Dread is the weekend so ordered like a military campaign that the only uncertainty is whether the guest or the hostess will be the first to surrender to exhaustion. The foreign visitor is a delicate creature, for he is under the strain of having to sight-see in one way or another every waking minute of his day. He may want to read inscriptions on monuments or walk through an automobile factory, but then again, he may not.

A sure way to pamper a departing guest is to pass him on to one or two carefully chosen friends in each of the places he will visit. Confronted by a long list of people I have been offhandedly advised to call in a strange city, I tend to sit helplessly in my hotel room. But when I know a note has been written in advance, I can be confident of a friendly reception.

As for presents, they should be small and unobtainable elsewhere. I find that even my English friends are fascinated by our succession of new gadgets for opening and closing things.

Despite these stage directions, entertaining foreigners is not like producing "Aida" in the backyard. It is simple if you plan for your visitor what you enjoy doing yourself. Enjoyment is infectious.

For small dinners, up to fourteen can be seated at the traditional dining table in Ambassador Stevenson's apartment. His personal preferences influence the table setting: place mats for dinners of twelve or less, low flower centerpiece, a simple menu of soup, entrée, one vegetable, salad, fresh fruit dessert, a single wine (here, a favored Cabernet Sauvignon) served always in white wineglasses. He dislikes large wineglasses, prefers the smaller size for both red and white wines.

Manhattan. The flow of guests-colleagues, friends, U.N. delegates, visiting heads of state—is constant, especially in the first hectic weeks after the Assembly convenes. Guest lists are prepared and invitations sent out two weeks ahead and the final list, seating plan and a choice of three menus submitted to Ambassador Stevenson by his Chief of Protocol, Rosemary Spencer. A man of definite tastes in wine and food (he keeps a deep-freeze in the kitchen stocked with lamb and game from his Illinois farm, often has fresh vegetables flown in), Mr. Stevenson okays one menu, frequently suggesting a substitute vegetable or entrée. The wine for all this entertaining is neatly docketed in interlocking Add-A-Comb units that take up half a closet, opposite page (liquor and mixers are in the other half) -about the same amount of space that could be allotted in an average household. Each wine is listed by type, name and number in a loose-leaf ring binder, like a restaurant wine list, and the numbers are written on rounds of paper and stuck to the foil-wrapped corks of the bottles, making it easy to identify and remove the desired wine. (To allow for later additions, numbering between types is not consecutive.) Ambassador Stevenson has become a great booster of California wines and the wall has already scored one major diplomatic coup: Secretary General U Thant wants one just like it.

than in the days of Talleyrand (who remarked that a good chef was of more importance on a diplomatic mission than a portfolio of papers), but it is no less vital in establishing and maintaining an entente cordiale. It also provides an opportunity for the representatives of wineproducing countries like the United States to introduce their foreign guests to the vins du pays. H&G, having recorded in August, 1962 the replacement of the wine cellar by its modern space-saving counterpart, the wine wall (with the bottles housed in racks or units in a closet or hallway), was interested to hear that the wine wall had achieved diplomatic status. A selection of wines representing the cream of California's wine crop has been presented by Governor Brown to Adlai E. Stevenson, U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, and recently installed in a closet of the large Waldorf Towers apartment where Mr. Stevenson does the bulk of his official entertaining. Large-scale cocktail receptions and dances are held in the penthouse of the U.S. Mission to the U.N., but luncheons and dinners for up to forty guests are given in the more relaxed atmosphere of this apartment high above

TAKE-HOME IDEAS BY THE GARDENFUL

World's Fair visitors uncovered a bonanza in one well-crowded acre of New York meadowland every time you turned around at the New York World's Fair last summer somebody was passing a miracle, unfolding a marvel or taking dead aim at day-after-tomorrow. But for simple, practical, imaginative ideas to take home with you and put to immediate use, few exhibits compare with the Julimar Farm acre of well-planned gardens. In one co-ordinated landscape scheme at least half-a-dozen major small garden plans are displayed—each one full formed, revealing impeccable attention to structural detail and a fine understanding of the use of good plants. It is unlikely that any one home site could or would benefit from all the ideas thus assembled. But almost any one of these formally designated garden areas—most of which appear on these pages—can be agreeably adapted to a small home landscape. Where an entire garden scheme may not be applicable, many individual landscaping and structural details can be borrowed to solve problems relating to walks, steps, paths, water gardens, fences, turf, edgings, terraces, walls, summer houses and basic grading.

The shaping of the earth itself is especially imaginative and skillful—not just because the whole area was once a swamp barely above brackish tide level, but because the surface has been manipulated like sculpture. Sweeping mounds and berms were created to help enclose the property, to form elevated plant beds—actually, pedestals for plants—and to provide a sense of distance and perspective that few acre lots normally enjoy. The plants themselves are an exceptionally fine lot. (Detailed on page 306, the list reads like a Who's Who of landscape plants.) They were well chosen in the first place, and well installed in the second. Intrinsically, they are of first quality (although some replacements have been necessary because of the subsurface drainage problems of the Fair site itself). The entire site was planned by Edward D. Stone Jr., landscape architect.

Each of the garden areas, left and opposite page, is separately adaptable to home use. Each, although meticulously planned, is essentially simple to plant and maintain in temperate zones. 1. First of three related and adjacent parterres, dubbed collectively by the sponsors the Renaissance Garden, is an extremely simple and effective arrangement of fountain, pool, brick paving and marble chips. Four boxwoods mark the corners; other box trims the bed edges. 2. A terrace that is meant to be looked at rather than sat ona rarity in landscapes todayforms the center of the triple Renaissance Garden. Always inviting, it need not be populated to be enjoyed (although there is no rule against placing furniture on the brick paving). Four rowan trees shade square beds planted with replaceable pansies. 3. Spiral topiary yews and a boxwood globe form the third parterre, balancing the design. 4. The large informal open area that occupies nearly half the total acre contains a variety of useful garden ideas-winding walks, a terrace, random stone paving, a number of raised mounds luxuriantly planted and a meandering stream which has a small waterfall at one point (but no beginning and no end). Two bridges grace the stream without overwhelming it. The whole expanse, for all its variety and detail, appears restful and uncluttered. 5. Raised brick beds featuring many herbs and variegated foliage plants suggest possibilities for making even the smallest garden permanently attractive to look at and easy to maintain in all weathers and seasons. 6. Of all shapes for a small reflecting pool, an oval seems the least trite and at the same time the most graceful. Here the pool is an oval within an oval-the whole turf area, rimmed with evergreen trees and shrubs that almost exclude the teeming Fair just beyond. (Homeowners who have only a neighbor's garage to conceal, take heart.) An enormous wrought-iron bird cage makes a charming gazebo, gives focus to the whole gentle garden.

A landscape designer's There is no substitute for a good plan, well thought out and well executed, whether in an international exposition or a neighborhood backyard. The plan of the dream landscape, above, is no exception. Compressed into a once miasmic acre of New York's Flushing Meadow, it is a never-never project, but it has been carried out in eminently practical ways. Usability is a vital part of every decorative element in the design, so the project is a real bonanza for homeowners who have a few thousand-or a few hundred-square feet to develop for family use and enjoyment. Naturally, as the setting for a public exhibit with only one entrance, the over-all plan must provide for a far greater traffic flow than any home garden is likely to involve. And the diversity of design elements is certainly greater than most homeowners would either require or want. But in one combination or another, the smaller plans-within-the-plan invite home site adaptation. Not only is the basic design imaginative—whether it involves interpretation of classic landscape themes or the freewheeling use of odd bits of space and expedient upheavals of grade-but the construction methods and materials have been carefully selected to assure permanence as well as attractiveness. Some of the most important construction techniques, opposite page, were used for details located by numbers on the plan.

> The specific applications of the ideas incorporated in this exhibit garden are as varied as building sites because the ideas themselves serve widely prevailing (if not actually universal) needs. Steps of one kind or another, walls, paths, uses of water, devices and patterns for the display of fine flowers and landscape plants, even bridges and barnyards, are appropriate to innumerable home settings. And whether the final result is designed for the use and enjoyment of thousands or simply the private delectation of a homeowner and his family, the basic concept is the same.

Raised beds enhance the plants

Masonry steps involving the use of cement require solid concrete underpinnings (compatibility of structural materials and construction methods is essential for satisfactory results). All stone and brickwork steps in Renaissance Garden are built on conventional concrete base adequate to prevailing climate.

Masonry walls, like masonry steps, can be no better than their foundations, especially in regions where winter frosts strike deep and heaving is a constant threat. Solid masonry above ground requires solid masonry below, such as foundations and footings beneath all brick and stonework in Renaissance Garden.

Flagstone steps often seem especially appropriate to informal garden design. But even though they may not need concrete foundations (or could not use them to advantage), solid anchorage and good underdrainage are essential. Here, flat stones used as treads are supported at front edges by square wood joists spiked to deep 2-by-4 anchors that extend down 4 feet through large stones into subsoil.

4 Tin

Timber retaining walls are often the best suited to woodland settings, and are almost always less expensive to build, because the construction is less formidable and the materials are less costly. But timber walls, whether built of heavy lumber or old railroad ties, must not be required to do the same kind of earth holding job that only masonry can do. Construction resembles that of flag steps, 3.

Bridges are by no means the most common adjuncts of garden landscaping, but when you are lucky enough to have a stream, or build one, you often need a bridge. Sometimes a culvert, or big pipes under a walkway, will serve the purpose, but the culvert must be adequate to the needs of normal flow and periods of flooding rain.

A garden bridge may call for major construction, in which case, to be usable, it must be designed according to the rules of good engineering. Yet simplicity is important, too. Here strength is guaranteed by the use of several timbers, each appropriately light in scale. Meticulously designed structural details like the railings of this bridge are just as important to the success of the total garden effect as living plants.

HOUSES

A house with an open heart

Most homes are geared to handling with relative ease a small dinner party or an intimate gathering of friends for coffee. But the holiday season inevitably inspires more challenging kinds of entertaining, and prompts a return of the old bugaboo: "cocktail party crush," a term that may apply to any sizable gathering whatever the hour or the liquid. One excellent way to avoid it and to give party-comers a truly good time is to give them enough room. A barn- or arena-size area is no answer—it just tends to confuse people. But rooms arranged so that guests can circulate freely, reach for food and drink effortlessly and pause, if they like, in sanctuaries of quiet conversation help tremendously toward making any party elegant and relaxed. An admirable example is the plan of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin K. Thrower's house in Sedgefield, a suburb of Greensboro, N.C. A contemporary structure of brick and vertical wood boarding, the house provides both a warm atmosphere for the Throwers themselves—whose married son and daughter have their own homes nearby-and a flowing series of spaces that can absorb almost any number of guests without seeming to swallow them up.

One of the reasons that traffic moves so easily through this house is its inviting courtyard which has floor-to-ceiling sliding glass doors on three sides. Because North Carolina's climate is gentle enough for enjoying the outdoors at least seven months of the (Continued)

The truly hospitable house is geared to convert serenely and repeatedly from an intimate environment for a family to a place in which a company of almost any size feels as physically comfortable and as spiritually at home as the host and hostess. Here are two houses that take such conversion in their stride and bring to the art of entertaining a new ease and grace. Although one is large, the other small, they welcome their guests by many of the same means.

Living room terrace at back of house faces a golf course.

1 The center court, screened from neighbors, yet open to sky, is a great party room that lures numbers of guests outdoors

Planted at the corners with dogwood trees and boxwood, paved with concrete for hard wear, the center court is a natural spot for sun-bathing and an easily supervised playground for the Thrower grandchildren when they come to visit. For an open house, the stage is set with night lighting in shrubbery, candlelit Japanese lanterns, pots of flowers. A portable bar is wheeled out from living room, and guests congregate around reflecting pool and fountain.

The huge, airy living room on one side enjoys vistas of the golf course beyond the spacious terrace, and on the other, a wall-size view across the court. Three seating clusters encourage guests to break up into small groups

The Throwers use their 41-foot living room whenever they entertain more than six people-before a seated dinner for twelve, at an open house for seventy-five or at a brunch for 150 golf fans. The room's large scale is unforbidding because it is divided into three separate areas, each with its own rug, sofa, chairs and coffee table. The broad open doorway to the dining room (corner of room, above), the glass doors to the adjoining terrace and, from the other side of the room, left, to the center court encourage movement of guests when there are large crowds. The walls, like those in most of the other rooms, are of the same materials used on the exterior: gray painted vertical boarding and oyster brick. Walnut paneling surmounts the slate hearth. year, the court has become a much-used sun-bathed or starlit extra room as well as a pleasant route by which to travel the 32-foot span from one side of the house to the other.

Mr. Thrower is the president of a manufacturing firm frequently visited by businessmen from all over the country, and twice a year the Throwers uphold the reputation of Southern hospitality with a series of evening open houses. "My husband just passes the word around and I never know how many are coming," Mrs. Thrower says with enviable calm. "It might be fifty or it might be a hundred."

The propinquity of the Sedgefield Country Club golf course offers another incentive for large parties. The Throwers' living room and its big terrace look out through widely spaced oaks, maples and dogwood on the ninth fairway—a marvelous convenience for Mr. Thrower who is an active golfer. And when the Greensboro Golf Open comes around each year, the Throwers give a champagne brunch for a crowd that usually numbers 150. On any of these large occasions, buffets are set up in the family room and in the dining room which can seat twelve at formal dinners, and Mrs. Thrower calls in three extra helpers to supplement her regular maid.

Even when filled with people, the house is always comfortable since it is completely air conditioned, winter and summer, and the air is changed constantly by electronic filters. Setting the rooms in order before or after parties is reduced to a minimum by the prevalence of low-upkeep materials: brick and vertical boarding for the walls; wood, ceramic tiles and masonry for the floors. (Continued)

3 The study, an intimate spot where the family spends many hours, gathers breezes from its own terrace and invariably attracts small groups of party guests seeking quiet moments of good conversation or the source of the music piped through the house nvitingly open to one of the main arteries of the house and four steps down from one of the two front entrance halls, the study, above and left, is where visitors linger in the late hours and the Throwers relax when home alone. This room shares its terrace with the master bedroom, although a separation between the two parts of that terrace is suggested by planting, left. The components of the stereo system that sends music to the court, master bedroom, dining room, family room, guest rooms and terraces are behind the closed doors of the walnut storage wall, which also contains a bar and sink. The comfortable reading chair gets direct light from a ceiling spot.

Like the rest of the house, the kitchen was planned to serve the needs of two or three as efficiently as the demands of many. It is not so cavernous that steps are wasted, but it is large enough for several people to work in without crowding and well equipped to manage the feeding of big numbers. Its location in the house makes it equally convenient for serving luncheon in the family room, hors d'oeuvres in the living room or dinner in the dining room.

Near one of the two front doors, there is a full-time powder room. In addition, one section of the double bathroom adjoining the master bedroom can be turned into a second powder room by closing the door dividing it from the dressing room, since its other door opens to a main hall. There is also plenty of room—and privacy—for overnight as well as party company. The two guest rooms each have a dressing table-lavatory, and they share a connecting bathroom.

All of the rooms are furnished with a pleasant variety of contemporary designs in a variety of materials—wood, metal, fabric, leather—none of which appear to have been chosen for a heavy-duty life. Yet when the Throwers' two granddaughters and five grandsons (ranging downward from 7 years to crawling age) come to visit, the furniture undergoes rough-and-tumble treatment that matches anything a home with still growing children—but fewer parties—could offer.

The sunny family room for informal meals and the openly adjacent kitchen are both intrinsic to the smoothly run ning hospitality of the house. The kitchen was designed to serve small or large numbers with equal efficiency, and its walnut-circled elegance often lures visitors he Throwers use their family room for dining alone, for two- or three-couple dinners and during larger parties, as an extra buffet center where guests chat around the welcoming circle of table and chairs. On one side, left, the room opens to the court, where children like to play around the reflecting pool; on the other side, above, is a private terrace, screened from neighbors by a wall. The room is divided from the kitchen by the plastictopped snack counter and a change in floor from oak parquet to charcoal ceramic tile. Adjoining the family room on the opposite side is the laundry room, also floored in charcoal ceramic, which houses a second refrigerator-freezer.

The kitchen is conveniently located to service the terrace and two other rooms in addition to the dining room, to which it connects by a swinging door opposite the snack bar. Walls are painted mustard gold, countertops are white plastic and cabinets are walnut with white porcelain knobs. An intercom connecting all rooms is under the spice rack in the center of the U-shaped work area. The cooking counter, left, contains a plug-in base for mixer, juicer, knife sharpener and blender. Across the aisle are built-in ovens and below a wall of green ceramic tile, a barbecue. For more pictures of this house, please turn to page 286.

A house that embraces all seasons

In the middle of a residential neighborhood in Seattle, Wash., yet as entrancingly close to nature as a cabin on a mountaintop, Mr. and Mrs. Tibor Freesz' house is refreshing proof that fairly small quarters need not be a liability in entertaining. Both Mr. Freesz, a busy hospital architect, and his wife spend a great deal of time outdoors at tennis, hiking and skiing. Their house, too, is designed for enjoyment of the outdoors—as is their hospitality. "We entertain our friends in different ways according to the seasons," was Mrs. Freesz' first comment when she began to describe her approach to entertaining.

The Freesz' house, a wood frame building encased by vertical rough-sawn cedar boarding, is located high above but very close to the shore of Lake Washington. Living room, dining room, dining terrace, kitchen and master bedroom all take advantage of the magnificent, airy view of the lake and far mountains that the site affords. Apart from the view, the most notable feature of the house is its courtyard, walled on the north and east by the L-shaped house, on the west by the carport and adjoining workshop, and on the south by a 6-foot-high cedar grape-stake fence that screens the house from neighbors whose lot is only a few feet away. In summer, most family activities—even sewing—move outdoors to the court. Opening the sliding glass doors between the court and the dining room and those between the dining room and its terrace creates a sweeping and varied space which combines with the living room to accommodate comfortably cocktail parties of fifty to except a people. For summer dinner parties, Mrs. Freesz (Continued)

A great feeling of spaciousness and airiness is packed into the modest dimensions of the house. From the front door, the three entertaining areas—the outdoor court, 1, the living room, 2, the dining room and its terrace, 3—as well as glimpses of the scenery beyond are immediately visible through the court's glass walls. Since the site slopes slightly downward on the living-dining side, the floors are lower there, and the rooms taller, although the roof remains at the same level. The house is screened from street view and noises and from a frequently fierce west wind by the workshop, the carport and the high cedar fence around the garden.

1 The court—a wind-free outdoor sun pocket by day and a fire-warmed, moonlit room in the evening—expands the living area visually and practically, provides a party site three seasons out of four

From one end of the court the eye can travel straight across the main living area to the lake and mountains in the distance. When the weather is cool, the roofed section at the left provides a sheltered spot for pre-dinner cocktails in front of the brick fireplace (see plan, opposite page), which is used only for warmth, not as a barbecue. A door at the opposite corner of the court leads directly to the kitchen, and from another corner, two doors open to carport and workshop. The court is paved with panels of concrete aggregate and planted with a great variety of trees and flowering bushes—pine, crab apple, magnolia, camellia and peach. The front door of the house, left, commands a view straight down the hall along the court and out the living room window.

The living room—an improbable few minutes from the core of downtown Seattle—offers a spectacular panorama of Lake Washington and the mountains beyond it, to be gazed upon again and again from the enveloping warmth of the hospitable fireside serves before-dinner drinks on the dining terrace and the meal itself at several tables for four to six in the court. For summer cocktail parties, a buffet is set up in the dining room and guests circulate freely between terrace and court. In spring and fall, drinks are served around the court fireplace as a prelude to seated dinners indoors for eight or ten. In winter, the living room comes into its own as a place where company can observe the elements from a position of cozy shelter. Dinner guests at that time of year are limited, as a rule, to the dining table's maximum of ten.

Although the living room and dining room are open to each other and much of the house is walled in glass, the need for privacy has been respected where it should be. The house is set back over 35 feet from the sidewalk and cut off from sidewalk view by the carport, workshop and fence. The hall leading from the front door, past the guest room to the master bedroom has a solid wall on the side opposite the court, and the bedroom windows are considerably smaller than those of the living room. The court itself is an oasis of seclusion in an urban setting, which makes it doubly enchanting as a background for Mrs. Freesz' hospitality.

The Freesz' living room has an intimate quality that immediately puts guests at ease. Whenever there is company, it is used—sometimes more, sometimes less, depending on the season. The lakeview window, extended at each corner by one glass panel in the adjoining wall, makes the room seem considerably larger than it is. The cedar boarding of the ceiling is similar to that used vertically on the exterior of the house, and the variegated brick of the fireplace is the same as that on the exterior of the chimney. A bookcase is built into the fireplace wall at the dining room end. Furniture is upholstered in shades of bitter green and copper; the rug is cream.

A HOUSE THAT EMBRACES ALL SEASONS continued

The dining room in winter is like a glassed-in gallery between court and terrace. In summer, doors on both sides of the room open to create a wonderful sweeping party space he dining room floor of random-shape slate links the room naturally with the paved outdoor court and terrace on either side and is eminently practical whether the doors are open or closed. The teak dining table is used for seated dinners in winter, and as a buffet in summer when guests eat at small tables set up in the court. At one end of the dining room, left, is a built-in sideboard and above it a passthrough to the kitchen. The coolest place in the house is the dining terrace, above left, tucked in the angle between the dining room's outer wall and the chimney of the living room, and overlooking the lake. The land drops sharply from the terrace to the lakeside street below. For more of this house, see page 296.

HOW YOU CAN PLAY

VARIATIONS ON A

SPACE

The essential challenge you face when you set out to furnish a room is the allocation and shaping of space. In many new houses and newly built apartments, devoid as they so often are of architectural distinction, this challenge may seem intensified by the lack of fire-places, paneling or handsome windows to serve as guidelines. Yet, totally neuter space often lends itself to a greater variety of livable and interesting arrangements than you might imagine. Even if it offers no help, it is apt to pose fewer hurdles to a strictly personal and individual solution.

Starting here is a concrete demonstration of the surprisingly different uses to which you can put three plain unadorned spaces. The first is a room, 12 by $18\frac{1}{2}$ feet, with a broad window at one end, typical of the larger bedrooms in many modern apartments. You will see how successfully it can also become a sitting room, a dining room or (on page 297) a private castle for a teen-age boy.

At one end of this room is our second space, a large walk-in closet, which might of necessity be pre-empted for wholly utilitarian storage. But even when storage space is of the essence, a few feet of closet may often be borrowed to great advantage for another purpose.

The third and largest space is a room 12½ by almost 23 feet with a wall-to-wall window at one end. At first glance it suggests a living room, but depending upon its location, it might also serve as a bedroom or as a living room with an unexpected plus.

Designers John and Earline Brice, who were responsible for all three of these series of variations-on-space, planned each room to meet the needs and tastes of a specific, although hypothetical, family, and they achieved their objectives by a variety of means. In some cases they reshaped the space with nonstructural partitions. In other cases they reshaped it visually by painting one or two walls in H&G Colors or by the canny use of Cabin Crafts rugs. Fabric—a variety of prints, sheers and upholstery weaves, all of Celanese Contemporary Fibers—performs a telling role not only in the character of each room, but sometimes in its proportions. The personal tastes of each family are indicated by paintings from the Bertha Schaefer Gallery.

A city sitting room with a country-house air

For a mature couple who have moved from a house in the country to a city apartment, the basic 12-by-18½-foot room has been reshaped to imply the existence of an adjoining porch or terrace. The louvered doors need never be closed since they stand flanked by partitions a few feet in from the window wall (see plan, above). Fabrics—a contemporary acanthus-leaf print and two checked upholstery weaves—serve as a link between the modern background and the family's antiques. Their collection of creil and Chinese porcelains inspired the tier of shelves, above, and the choice of H&G's Mimosa for one wall. A family dining room, lively and flexible

For a family with three children of 2 years and up, a space identical to the sitting room on the previous page is furnished as a dining room, below left-cheerful and practical for family meals, but sophisticated enough for dinner parties after the children's good night. One wall of H&G's Pistachio makes a flattering backdrop for the dark woods of the provincial armoire and the bar cabinet that wheels to any part of the room. The plaid curtains, fittingly provincial, fittingly informal, stop short at the window sill leaving the space clear for an extremely useful pair of serving tables. Gaiety surrounds the dining table in the form of a madly flowered rug and painted dining chairs, two cushioned in white, two in black. Cohama fabrics;

Another couple will use the same space as a bedroom, right, and since their sights are set on a larger house, some of the furniture is earmarked for their future dining room. The cabinet that will eventually store china serves as a clothespress; the breakfast table is teamed with chairs that will ultimately preside at a full-scale dining table. Any need for specifically bedroom furniture, other than beds, is eliminated by the line of built-ins under the window-all painted H&G's Sunflower except for the white countertop. And sheer printed curtains give the room a pleasant touch of femininity without fussiness. A sunny bedroom with a stake in the future

Three ways to get extra mileage from a walk-in closet In spite of the ubiquitous cry for larger and larger closets, many a modern walk-in contains a few square feet that might better be put to other use. Here are three possibilities for a closet of 8 by 10 feet with double fold-back doors: (1) A single panel of Masonite, half the width of the closet, screens the hanging area, transforms a few feet into a pocket-handkerchief dressing room; (2) The same few feet backed by a partition that is joined to the ceiling with a gaily striped "awning" simulates a potting shed (strictly decorative) for a changing display of flowering plants; (3) a counter built across one whole end of the closet turns it into a miniature sewing room.

Four feet longer than the rooms on pages 262-264, our third basic space measures 12½ feet by 22 feet, 10 inches. Given good and sufficient reason, it might be split by a room divider, or it might be used in toto, even by a young couple with a modicum of furniture. Here, the lavish use of strong colors and bold patterns makes a comparatively few pieces go a long way, and the 6-by-9-foot rug, almost centered in the expanse of dark floor, helps significantly to diminish the room's apparent size. In the corner opposite the windows (see plan, left), a series of shelves houses the components of the husband's meticulously monitored hi-fi system. Lamp table, upholstered chairs and sofa by Selig; Cohama and Quaker upholstery fabrics; Bloomcraft curtain fabric.

In tandem: a living room plus a working studio

For a woman whose hobby is ceramics, the same basic space has been divided with great logic and no fuss into a living room, left, and a tiny workshop, above. A wood-framed panel of the same woven plaid that covers the sofa forms the partition, and on the studio side the pebble-patterned vinyl floor is left sensibly bare. But the studio receives little notice as visitors walk by since their attention is drawn immediately to the far end of the living room where wall-to-wall curtains are punctuated by see-through panels of cane framed in wood, and a planter box runs the width of the room. Sofa and tub chairs from Drexel's "American Review" collection; Cohama fabrics; Amtico vinyl tile.

A city bedroom with a year-round garden

For a new-in-town family that misses the fresh scents of lawn and plants outside their bedroom window, a few feet of the long room have been lopped off to make a pot garden. Panels of wood lattice simulate the garden wall, and printed curtains, so sheer that light from the windows behind easily penetrates them, conceal the fact that the garden is only a few feet long. New idea for a tiny tot's TV perch: a miniature cane-seated bench, actually designed for Sybarite poodles and Pekingese. Curtains, Win Anderson fabric; bedspreads by Grosby Products. Notes for the lostess BY DIANA BRYAN

When our daughter was a little girl, she used to be allowed occasionally to pick out the china which we were going to use that night for dinner. Somehow it fell into two categories in her mind: "most best" and "cozy." Well, the iron-stone which my friend Kay Jones used at a luncheon last week was cozy as anything around for a long time, and charming to boot. Made by Mason, "Belvedere" is a chintzlike large floral pattern in blue and green. Nostalgic it may be, but the clear-cut pattern and the bold color combination give it an affinity for a contemporary setting, too.

Christmases come and Christmases go and the styles of holiday decorating change, but every family has its own inimitable, well-loved customs without which Christmas isn't Christmas. One of our least pretentious but very pleasurable habits is borrowed from the Welsh. We set small white candles in oranges which in turn rest on tiny wreaths of green. These we line up on the library hearth to burn on Christmas Eve and during the great day. Another is our tradition of not throwing out our tree after the holidays, but putting it in a bucket of sand in the garden and hanging it with suet balls for the birds. We leave it out until the last needle has dropped, much to the enjoyment of the sparrows and other winter-overers.

In our family, we still hold with the tradition of making some of our Christmas presents. It not only affords us a sense of satisfaction, but provides an opportunity to give things that aren't generally available. Young Diana makes pomander balls with cloves and oranges (and sometimes lemons), tying them prettily with narrow velvet ribbons to give to much-loved courtesy aunts for their closets. She also collects flowers and foliage, which she dries to give in bunches to friends who like to make winter arrangements. For my part, I get an enormous pleasure from putting up jars of homemade chili sauce, green tomato chutney and my own very firm garlic dill pickles. I've even bottled our secret receipt for chocolate sauce-gooey, glossy and rich, the inheritance from a Swedish cook we once had. Granted, none of these things are particularly esoteric, but still and all, you can't really buy them. Gaily wrapped, they make tangible tokens of our affectionate regard.

Tips for my party-food file, holiday dessert department: Dried apricots, soaked overnight in cider and then boiled in the same, treated to a daub of butter, a small scoop of sugar, sprinkled with chopped almonds and served very cold. Peeled baking apples, cored and filled with apple jelly, closely packed in a dish and baked with white wine until just tender. Good wine jelly into which chopped glacéed fruits have been folded, chilled in a very elaborate mold, turned out and served with whipped cream.

It's fun to use off-beat containers for flowers, especially for little blossoms or short-stemmed blooms. The other day I made an arrangement using test tubes in their rack, from our son's outgrown chemistry set-a few little flowers in each test tube, all in a row. Sometimes I heap a bouquet of thick, short blooms in our silver gravy boat (which, incidentally, I have found also makes a fine candy dish). Hand-painted soap dishes, dear to the days of my mother's girlhood, make sweet flower containers, too, the blossoms tucked into the drainage holes to create a fat floral pin-cushion effect.

Dried Fruit and Nut Cook Book

By James A. Beard

Dried fruits and nuts have left their mark on the cooking of practically every country in the world. In the days before canning and freezing, these were among the few foods that could be counted on to keep. Prunes and other dried fruits have always figured in the cuisine of cold northern lands, from soups to desserts. Raisins, dates and figs, pine and pistachio nuts abound in the hot countries bordering the Mediterranean. The Chinese married walnuts to chicken, the Southeast Asians exalted the peanut. The Spaniards adopted the almond from the Moors and introduced it to their American conquests in the New World, where they found the native American pecan, close cousin to the English walnut. The climates of the United States are kind to fruit- and nut-bearing trees. California produces superb raisins and prunes, almonds and walnuts; in Hawaii, the incomparable Macadamia nut flourishes. In the supermarkets of every city are nuts and fruits in abundance. (For the widest selection of dried fruits, look in Jewish delicatessens and other shops that specialize in them.) You can buy nuts in or out of the shell, whole or sliced, and California now supplies ready-ground almonds. Nuts are so varied in flavor and have so many roles in cooking that it is a shame to regard them only as tasty morsels for cocktail munching or ingredients for cakes and cookies. Try the pungent black walnut as a coating for fish or in homemade bread, the succulent pine nut in stuffings, pistachios in mayonnaise or Macadamia nuts ground in ice cream, whole in a salad or as a curry accompaniment. The delicate filbert (the domesticated version of the wild hazelnut) can successfully substitute for almonds in macaroons or cake recipes or add crisp crunchiness to an exotic lamb ragout. The almond itself, finely ground, gives a cream sauce for chicken or a cold soup like gazpacho the utmost suavity. One of the delights of these oldest of foods is their adaptability, which positively cries out for the cook's creative imagination.

Ways to use dried fruits

Dried fruits do not have a long shelf age. They should be bought as needed. If you do store them in your kitchen, keep them airtight. To prepare them, soak them first for several hours if they are quite dry, then follow directions on the package or container. Or, cover with water and bring to a boil, add sugar to taste and cook for 5–10 minutes, or until they are tender but not mushy. Slices of lemon or a touch of vanilla in the liquid makes them more delicious.

You may poach several different kinds of fruits together if you wish and combine them with kirsch or cognac for a compote which may be served either hot or cold.

Dates may be seeded and then stuffed with nuts of various kinds, with fondant or with chopped dates. Roll in powdered sugar and serve as a sweet after a rather heavy dinner, or as a snack for late evening.

Soaked Prunes and Apricots

Soak prunes and apricots in large glass-topped jars—the prunes, pitted or unpitted, marinated in sherry or Madeira; the apricots in sherry. You will find a great many uses for them. Give them a week's soaking before use and replenish the jars before they are completely empty. You can serve soaked prunes plain as a simple dessert or with the addition of heavy cream or whipped cream. Serve the soaked apricots with a sprinkling of chopped pistachio nuts or as an accompaniment to curry.

Puffed Raisins

Keep a small jar with a ground glass stopper filled with raisins in cognac ready for adding to baked dishes. They are also excellent with fruit compotes and with curries.

Soaked Dates

Place dates in a jar and cover with cognac or Armagnac. Seal the jar or make it airtight and let dates soak for two weeks before using.

Appetizers

Broiled Stuffed Dates

Stuff dates with either nut meats or cheese and wrap with partially cooked bacon. Broil until bacon is crisp. Serve at once.

Broiled Stuffed Prunes

18 pitted prunes, soaked 18 toasted walnut halves, lightly salted, or 36 salted pecan halves 18 partially cooked strips of bacon

Drain soaked prunes on absorbent paper. Stuff each one with a walnut half or two pecan halves. Wrap with partially cooked bacon and secure with a toothpick. Broil about 6" from the broiling unit until the bacon is crisp and the prunes heated through. You may vary this by placing a layer of cream cheese between the pecan halves before stuffing the prunes.

Broiled Stuffed Figs

Soak dried figs in sherry or port for 36 hours. Split and fill with nuts or cream cheese or a combination of the two. Or stuff with a very ripe Cheddar. Wrap with partially cooked bacon strips and secure with a toothpick. Broil until the bacon is crisp and figs are heated through.

Marinated dried fruits make a quick, luscious dessert fruit (prunes in Madeira, apricots in sherry, raisins in cognac) in separate stacking sections is a space-saving boon for a kitchen counter.

Anchoiade Croze

This is a version of the popular Provençal hors d'oeuvre from Austin de Croze's delightful book "What to Eat and Drink in France." It sounds weird, but is extremely good with drinks.

14 dried figs, chopped
16 anchovy fillets, chopped fine
2-3 cloves garlic, chopped fine
1 small onion, chopped
2 or 3 pimientos, chopped
1 cup walnuts, filberts or black walnuts, chopped
Olive oil
Crisp French bread or rolls

Combine the figs, anchovies, garlic, onion, pimientos and nuts and work very thoroughly to a thickish paste, adding enough olive oil to moisten. Split the bread or rolls and brush both halves with olive oil. Spread with the paste mixture, and press together. Place in a 325° oven to heat thoroughly. Bread will take about 15–20 minutes, rolls somewhat less. Cut in slices. Serves 10–12 as a cocktail accompaniment.

Vegetables

Zucchini-Nut Casserole

6 medium zucchini, sliced
3 slices white bread, soaked in milk
1 egg
Salt, pepper to taste
½ cup coarsely chopped almonds or peanuts
Bread crumbs
Butter

Place the zucchini in a saucepan with a little water and cook until tender but still crisp. Drain and chop into small pieces. Mash the bread and combine with the zucchini. Beat the egg slightly, then stir into zucchini mixture with salt, pepper and the nuts. Pour into a buttered casserole, sprinkle with the bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake in a 350° oven until crumbs have browned. Good with cold meats. Serves 4.

Rice with Pine Nuts

1 cup finely chopped onion 1 cup pine nuts 1½ teaspoons paprika ½ teaspoon Tabasco ½ cup olive oil 4 cups hot cooked rice Salt, pepper Chopped parsley 2 pimientos, chopped

Sauté the onion, pine nuts, paprika and Tabasco in the olive oil for 6-8 minutes. Toss with the hot rice, using two forks. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Garnish with the chopped parsley and chopped pimientos. Good with lamb dishes or with braised chicken. Serves 4-6.

Nut and Vegetable Combinations

Nuts to be added to vegetables and casseroles may be lightly sautéed in butter or toasted in a 350° oven for 15–20 minutes, until they reach the desired stage of brownness. If almonds or Brazil nuts are to be sliced, blanch them in boiling water for 3 minutes first, it will make them easier to cut. Or buy them ready sliced.

How to blanch, slice almonds

Soak almonds in boiling water to soften skins. Holding almond tip outward, rub between thumb and forefinger. The skin will slip off easily.

Slice almond lengthwise with small, sharp knife.

For slivered almonds, lay the slices flat on chopping board and cut in lengthwise strips.

Use sliced or slivered almonds, lightly sautéed in butter and then salted:

- 1. With freshly cooked and buttered snap beans.
- 2. With sautéed sliced mushrooms and new peas.
- 3. With extra butter and a touch of garlic to complement freshly cooked cauliflower.
- 4. As a coating for potato croquettes. Roll the croquettes in almonds instead of bread crumbs. 5. To top mashed and buttered sweet potatoes. Brown quickly under the broiler or return to a 450° oven for 5 minutes.

Use toasted or sautéed walnuts, halved or coursely chopped:

- 1. With broccoli, dressed with a little garlic-flavored olive oil.
- 2. As a topping for a purée of parsnips blended with butter and a little Madeira.
- 3. With sautéed eggplant or broiled eggplant and a touch of melted garlic butter.
- 4. As a topping for mashed and buttered Hubbard squash seasoned with a tiny bit of nutmeg and cinnamon. Put under the broiler or in a hot oven for a few minutes.

Use sautéed or toasted pecans:

- 1. To top an eggplant and cream casserole.
- 2. With grated Gruyère cheese as a topping for ratatouille. Bake for 15 minutes in a 375° oven.

3. With onion slices braised with Madeira.

- Use sautéed or toasted peanuts, broken up:
 1. With freshly cooked green beans or wax beans and bacon, cooked until crisp.
- 2. With lima beans and bacon.
- 3. With braised celery.

Use whole sautéed or toasted filberts:

- 1. With buttered freshly cooked snap beans or sautéed haricots verts.
- 2. With braised onions, cheese and Madeira.
- 3. With buttered tender sweet peas.

4. With snow peas that have been cut in julienne and lightly cooked in salted water.

5. With sautéed mushrooms flavored with onion and a touch of garlic.

Use pine nuts:

- 1. With tomatoes and fresh basil in a highly flavored dish of stewed tomatoes.
- 2. With ratatouille.
- 3. With scalloped onions.
- 4. With bacon, wilted dandelion greens, garlic and a touch of fresh mint.
- With scalloped eggplant prepared with tomatoes and onions.

Use sliced toasted Brazil nuts:

- 1. With green beans, freshly cooked and lavishly buttered.
- 2. With broiled eggplant slices, olive oil and freshly ground black pepper.
- 3. With fava beans flavored with garlic, olive oil and freshly ground black pepper.
- 4. With spinach wilted in olive oil, soy sauce and a touch of garlic. Toss as you would a salad.

Walnut-Breaded Sole

Flour 6 fillets lemon sole or flounder 2 eggs, slightly beaten, mixed with 2 tablespoons cream 1 cup bread crumbs 11/2 cups coarsely chopped black walnuts or malnute Oil, butter Salt, pepper Lemon quarters or slices

Flour the fillets. Dip into the beaten egg and cream, then into the crumbs and nuts. Sauté quickly in a blend of oil and butter until delicately browned on both sides. Salt and pepper to taste. Serve with lemon.

Boiled potatoes and a cucumber salad are delicious with this unusual fish dish, and a good Alsatian Riesling is an excellent choice for the accompanying wine. Serves 6.

Loin of Pork with Prunes

1 loin of pork (about 5 pounds) 12-14 prunes, soaked in sherry or Madeira and pitted Nutmeg 1 teaspoon thyme Salt, pepper

With a sharp knife make a deep incision lengthwise along the thickest part of the meat. Spread the meat apart, and stuff the prunes into this opening. Lamb Marrakech

3 pounds lean lamb from leg or shoulder, cut in 11/2" cubes

1/2 cup peanut or olive oil

3 cloves garlic, chopped

2 teaspoons salt

1 teaspoon crushed red chili pepper

1/2 teaspoon Spice Parisienne

Crisp fried onion rings Chopped parsley

Brown the lamb in the oil. Add the onion and garlic and brown lightly. Add the seasonings, tomatoes and raisins and bring to a boil. Cover, adding a small amount of liquid if necessary, and simmer for 11/2 hours, or place uncovered in a 350° oven and baste well from time to time until the lamb is tender. If you do the latter, you may have to add more liquid or cover the pan for half the time. Add the toasted almonds and filberts, onion rings and parsley and heat through. Serve with rice, tossed with chopped parsley and chopped fresh coriander if available. Drink a robust red wine with this dish. Serves 6.

Stuffed Vine Leaves

24-28 vine leaves 11/2 cups cooked rice 1/2 pound raw ground pork or lamb 1/2 cup pine nuts 1/2 cup currants or sultana raisins Salt to taste 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper 1 egg, beaten 1/3-1/2 cup olive oil Lemon juice Thyme, chopped parsley for garnish

Vine leaves in jars are available at many specialty shops. As they are packed in brine, be certain to wash them well before using. Remove the stem. If you use fresh vine leaves, soak them in olive oil to cover for 24 hours. Blanch for 2 minutes in boiling water.

Combine the cooked rice, raw meat, nuts, raisins and salt and pepper. Bind with the egg. Form into tiny balls and place one on each vine leaf. Fold and roll so that the stuffing is firmly enveloped. (If you place the ball in the center, and fold in the side points and then roll, the envelope will stay intact.)

Place the stuffed leaves in a skillet with olive oil, a little lemon juice and water to half cover. Cook gently for 15-20 minutes, turning carefully two or three times during the cooking. Remove to a rack covered with absorbent paper, or cool in the pan.

Serve cold with a little of the cooking liquid and a dusting of thyme. Or serve with yoghurt and a sprinkling of thyme and parsley. Serves 4 as a luncheon dish, 6 as a first course or accompaniment.

Maccheroni con le Sarde

This is a delicious Sicilian dish which is unusual in many ways and a real show-stopper whenever it is served. The recipe calls for fresh sardines, but if you cannot get them, you might use smelts. If the grunions are running in California, they would be superb.

1 pound fresh sardines 1 large onion, chopped Olive oil 6 tomatoes, peeled, seeded and chopped 1/2 cup sultana raisins 1/2 cup pine nuts 1 tiny envelope (about 1/4 teaspoon) saffron 1/2 teaspoon basil 1 small can anchovy fillets, finely chopped Flour Salt, pepper 11/2 cups bread crumbs 2 heads fresh fennel 1 pound good semolina macaroni

Skin and fillet half the sardines and cut into small pieces. Sauté the onion in 1/4 cup olive oil. Add the tomatoes and the cut-up sardines. Cook until soft. Add the raisins, pine nuts, saffron, basil and the anchovies. Cook this sauce down for 3-4 minutes.

Flour the remaining sardines and sauté in olive oil until brown and crisp. Salt and pepper to taste.

Heat the crumbs with 1/4 cup oil, or more if they absorb it all. Wash and slice the fennel very thinly, and cook in 21/2 quarts salted water. When nearly tender, add the macaroni and cook until done.

Drain the macaroni and fennel and blend with the sauce. Butter a baking dish and make a layer of the macaroni-fennel mixture, a layer of crumbs and a layer of the sautéed sardines. Top with macaroni. Strew the top with crumbs, and sprinkle with oil. Bake at 350° for 20 minntes. Serves 4.

How to stuff vine leaves

Remove brine-packed leaves from the jar. Separate carefully and rinse well under cold water. Dry on paper towels.

Put vine leaf flat on board, veined side upward. Form rice-meat mixture into small ball, place in center of leaf.

Fold side points of the leaf toward the center, covering the ball of filling. Roll up, starting at stem end of leaf.

Fold over point at top, like envelope flap. Place in skillet this side down so leaf does not unroll in cooking.

Sauces, Stuffings

Pistachio Mayonnaise

1/2 cup shelled pistachio nuts

1 egg

1/2 teaspoon dry mustard

1/2 teaspoon salt

2 tablespoons white cider vinegar

1 cup salad oil

Blend the nuts very, very fine in an electric blender. Turn off the motor and add the egg, mustard, salt, vinegar and 1/4 cup oil. Cover the container and turn motor on high. Immediately remove the cover and quickly add remaining oil in a steady stream. Turn off the motor as soon as all the oil is added.

This makes a heavy mayonnaise that can be diluted, if you wish, with heavy cream. It's delicious with hot or cold poached fish, or with chicken or meat salads. Makes about 11/2 cups.

Prune Sauce for Meat or Game

1 cup pitted wine-soaked prunes

2 tablespoons finely cut orange zest

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon thick steak sauce, such as A-1

Purée the prunes, or whirl in a blender, and combine with the orange zest. Heat for about 3 minutes over medium heat. Prunes should be just below the boiling point. Add the mustard and steak sauce and correct the seasoning. Cool. Serve with cold meats, game, hamburgers or barbecued meats. Makes about 11/2 cups.

Blender with a timer simplifies nut grinding

Set the second timer and this blender will stop when nuts are ground as you want them. Times for 1/2 cup nuts: Almonds and pistachios, 2. 5 and 15 seconds at high speed for coarse, fine and pulverized grinds. Walnuts and pecans, 4 seconds at low speed for coarse, 2 and 5 at high for fine and pulverized. Peanuts, 3 seconds at low (coarse), 3 and 5 at high (fine and pulverized). Brazil nuts, 2 and 4 seconds at high speed for coarse and fine grinds.

Add salt and liquor, Makes about 2 cups. Serve warm with puddings or over ice cream combined with almonds, pistachio nuts or Macadamia nuts. You may also combine the sauce with 1 cup shredded preserved pineapple and flavor it with 2 tablespoons light rum.

Sicilian Spaghetti Sauce

2 cloves garlic, chopped

16-20 anchovy fillets, cut in pieces

1/2 cup olive oil

1/2 cup sultana raisins

1/3 cup black walnuts

3/4 teaspoon basil

1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

Heat the chopped garlic and anchovy fillets in the olive oil, then add the raisins, walnuts and basil. Season with the pepper and salt if needed. Spoon over spaghetti or other pasta, and sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serves 2.

Chocolate Walnut Sauce

1/2 cup butter

2 cups chopped walnuts

2 cups semi-sweet chocolate pieces

Melt the butter in a heavy skillet. Add the walnuts and cook over a medium heat, stirring constantly, until lightly browned. Remove from heat, add the chocolate pieces and stir until smooth. Serve warm over ice cream or plain cake. Makes 21/2 cups.

Mango Macadamia Sauce

14-ounce can mangoes in syrup

2/3 cup sugar

½ teaspoon vanilla

1 cup Macadamia nuts

Combine mangoes, sugar and vanilla, and cook down over medium heat for 10 minutes. Cool and add Macadamia nuts. Makes about 2 cups. Serve cold on vanilla or coffee ice cream or on raspberry sherbet.

Apricot Sauce

11/2 cups sherry-soaked apricots

1 cup sugar

1/4 teaspoon salt

1/3 cup kirsch, cognac or apricot liqueur

Purée or blend the apricots and combine with the sugar. Bring to a boil and simmer for 5-8 minutes. If the sauce seems too thick, add a little of the soaking sherry or a little water.

Fruit and Nut Stuffings

1. Add 1 cup pecans or walnuts to your favorite bread stuffing for turkey or chicken.

2. Add Brazil nuts, blanched and toasted, to a hearty sausage stuffing for turkey or chicken. 3. Stuff a goose with marinated dried prunes, apple quarters and chestnuts. Add a few sliced Brazil nuts and a few raisins to the mixture, and sprinkle with 1/4 teaspoon cinnamon.

Breads and Cookies

Cashew Shortbread

2 cups sifted cake flour

1/2 teaspoon baking powder

1 cup softened butter

1/2 cup confectioners' sugar

1 cup chopped salted cashews

Sift the flour and baking powder together. Work the butter and sugar together until mixture is as smooth as possible. Mix in the flour and cashews thoroughly. Refrigerate for at least an hour before baking.

Divide the dough in half. On a lightly floured board, roll out one portion at a time (keep remaining portion in refrigerator) about 1/3" thick. Work fast because of the richness of the dough. Cut into 2" squares. Bake on an ungreased cookie sheet in a preheated 375° oven for 15 minutes. Makes about 31/2 dozen.

Pecan Kisses

3 egg whites 2 cups confectioners' sugar 1 teaspoon vanilla 1/2 cup chopped pecans

Beat the egg whites until they hold precise points. Little by little beat in the sugar until you have a smooth, satiny meringue. Stir in the vanilla and chopped pecans. Drop the mixture from a teaspoon onto a cookie sheet lined with brown wrapping paper. Bake in a preheated 350° oven for 15-20 minutes. Makes about 40-45.

Pistachio Bread

1¼ cups milk
1 package active dry yeast
Sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
Melted butter, about ¾ cup
4 cups all-purpose flour
¾-1 cup coarsely chopped pistachio nuts
1 egg, well beaten

Heat the milk to lukewarm. Sprinkle the yeast over ¼ cup of the milk to soften, then combine the remaining milk with ½ cup sugar, the salt, ½ cup melted butter and about half the flour. Beat until smooth. Add the yeast and remaining flour, continuing to beat until dough is smooth. Cover with a dish towel and let rise in a warm place until double in size. Turn out on a lightly floured board and knead until smooth.

Cut dough in half and roll each half into a thin rectangle. Brush surface with melted butter and sprinkle generously with sugar and nuts. Beginning with long edge of each rectangle, roll dough like a jelly roll. Join the ends to form a ring and place both rings on a greased baking sheet. Snip top into slices with scissors or knife but do not cut through the roll completely. Spread or separate the slices, pressing one slice toward the center of the ring, and the following slice toward the outside edge. Let rise in a warm spot until almost double in size. Brush with well-beaten egg and bake in a preheated 375° oven for 25–30 minutes.

Nut Macaroons

1 cup blanched or unblanched almonds ½ teaspoon almond extract ¾ cup sugar 2-3 egg whites

Grind the almonds in an electric blender or put through a food grinder several times. Combine the nuts with the almond extract, sugar and enough unbeaten egg white to make a mixture that is soft yet still holds a shape. Beat hard for several minutes. Put mixture in a pastry bag and pipe onto a greased and lightly floured baking sheet, making the macaroons about $1\frac{1}{2}$ " in diameter. Bake in a preheated 350° oven for 15-20 minutes. The macaroons are baked sufficiently when the surface is hard but the centers are still moist. Makes about 2 dozen.

Note: Other nuts such as filberts, walnuts and pecans can be substituted for almonds. Use 1 teaspoon vanilla in place of the almond extract.

How to chop nuts with a Blitz Hacker

Put nuts under plastic cover of this Swiss gadget. Smack (do not press) spring top sharply and rapidly with palm, forcing blades downward.

Black Walnut Bread

3 cups sifted all-purpose flour 4½ teaspoons baking powder ½ cup sugar 1 teaspoon salt 1 cup chopped black walnuts 2 eggs 1 cup milk ¼ cup butter, melted

Sift the flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together into a mixing bowl, then stir in the nuts. Beat the eggs, milk and melted butter. Add to the flour mixture and stir until very well mixed, but don't attempt to beat out all the lumps. Spoon into a greased loaf pan and bake in a preheated 350° oven for 1 hour. Turn out of pan and cool before serving.

Peanut Cookies

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour 2 teaspoons baking powder 1/4 teaspoon salt 1/4 cup butter 1/2 cup sugar 2 eggs, well beaten 1 cup finely chopped peanuts 4 tablespoons milk 1 teaspoon lemon juice Whole peanuts

Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together. Work the butter until soft, then add the sugar, gradually working until the mixture is very light and fluffy. Stir in the eggs thoroughly, then add the flour mixture, peanuts, milk and lemon juice. Drop from a teaspoon onto an ungreased cookie sheet and stick a whole peanut on top. Bake in a preheated 325° oven for 12–15 minutes. Makes 4 dozen.

Rusks of Almonds

2 eggs
¾ cup sugar
1½ cups all-purpose flour
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 cup finely chopped blanched almonds

Beat the eggs until they are thick and lemoncolored. Gradually add the sugar and continue beating until exceedingly smooth. Sift in the flour, salt and baking powder. Blend thoroughly and add the almonds.

Keep blades moving quickly until nuts are chopped as you wish, occasionally moving nuts from sides of circle to center for even chopping.

Grease a jelly roll pan generously. Spoon 2 long strips of batter, about 2" wide, down the length of the pan, keeping the strips apart from each other. Bake in a preheated 350° oven for 12-15 minutes. Remove from the oven and cut into diagonal slices about 1" wide, separating the slices slightly with your knife. Return to a 250° oven and bake 8 minutes longer. Turn off oven heat and let the rusks remain in the oven 20 minutes longer. Makes 25-30.

Rocks

½ cup butter
¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
2 eggs
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon all-spice
Dash of salt
¼ cup water or sherry
1 cup broken walnut meats

1 cup raisins

Work the butter until soft, then gradually work in the sugar until the mixture is very light and creamy. Beat in the eggs one at a time.

Sift the flour with the soda, cinnamon, cloves, all spice and salt. Add to the butter mixture alternately with the water or sherry. Give the batter a good beating after each addition. Finally, stir in the nuts and raisins. Drop the batter by teaspoons onto a greased cookie sheet, leaving space between each for spreading. Bake for 12 minutes in a preheated 375° oven. Makes 28–30 small cookies.

Desserts

Torta Lampo

2 squares (2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
½ cup blanched almonds
¼ cup walnuts
5 eggs, separated
¾ cup sugar
½ cup strong coffee
Whipped cream, optional

Melt the chocolate over hot water. Chop both the almonds and walnuts very fine by hand or in an electric blender. Beat the egg yolks lightly, adding the sugar, nuts, melted chocolate and coffee. Mix well. Beat the egg whites until they stand in peaks when you lift up the beater, then fold gently but thoroughly into the chocolate mixture. Pour into a 9" cake pan that has been previously greased and dusted with a light film of flour. Bake in a 350° oven for 1 hour. Cool the cake before serving. Serve with or without whipped cream.

Frozen Apricot Mousse

1½ cups sherry-soaked apricots ½ cup sugar ⅓ cup kirsch 2 cups heavy cream, whipped

Blend or purée the apricots and mix well with the sugar and kirsch. Fold in the whipped cream. Freeze in an attractive serving dish or container for 4–6 hours. Serves 4.

Fabulous Nut Cake

2 pounds shelled pecans, walnuts or black walnuts

6 eggs, separated

11/2 cups butter

11/2 cups sugar

3/4 cup milk

1/4 cup cognac

1 teaspoon almond extract

31/2 cups sifted all-purpose flour

1 teaspoon cream of tartar

Confectioners' sugar

Chop the nuts coarsely. Beat the egg yolks slightly. Work the butter until soft and creamy, then gradually work in the sugar until the mixture is light and fluffy. Combine with the beaten egg yolks and beat thoroughly. Mix the milk, cognac and almond extract together and stir into the batter alternately with the flour.

Beat the egg whites until foamy, sprinkle the cream of tartar over them, then continue beating until egg whites hold a definite point when you lift up the beater.

Pour the batter over the nuts and mix well with your hands. Then fold in the beaten egg whites gently until all patches of white have disappeared. Grease and line the bottom and sides of a 10" tube pan with oiled brown paper and pour mixture into pan. Bake in a 275° oven for 21/2-3 hours.

Cool 30 minutes before removing from the pan. Turn out on a cake rack, pull off paper very carefully and cool completely. Sprinkle top with confectioners' sugar before cutting.

Fruit and Walnut Pie

Pastry for a 2-crust pie

11/2 cups coarsely chopped cooked prunes

11/2 cups coarsely chopped cooked apricots

1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

1 cup sugar

Grated rind of 1 lemon

1 teaspoon vanilla

Line a 9" pie pan with pastry. Save remaining pastry for the top. Chill while preparing filling.

Combine the prunes, apricots, walnuts, sugar, lemon rind and vanilla. Spoon into the unbaked pastry shell. Cut remaining pastry into strips and cover filling, lattice fashion. Bake in a preheated 475° oven for 15 minutes. Reduce oven heat to 350° and continue baking 15-20 minutes longer, or until pastry is well browned.

How to chop dried fruits by hand

Use a heavy chef's knife and chopping board. With point on board, move blade up and down. Dip blade in hot water to prevent fruits sticking.

Raisin Bourbon Soufflé

1/3 cup butter

2 tablespoons sugar

2/3 cup Bourbon 1/2 cup raisins, blended to a purée

5 egg volks

6 egg whites

1/4 cup puffed raisins (see page 271)

Make a roux with the butter and flour by melting the butter, gradually adding the flour and stirring until smooth. Gradually stir in the sugar and Bourbon. Cook until the mixture is thickened. Add the blended raisins and egg yolks, and cook for just a moment or two longer. Cool slightly. Beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold into the mixture. Fold in puffed raisins. Pour into a buttered and sugared 11/2quart soufflé dish and bake in a 375° oven for 25-35 minutes. Serve with Bourbon-flavored whipped cream. Serves 4-6.

Apricot Soufflé

1 cup sherry-soaked apricots, with a little of their marinade

1 cup sugar

1/2 teaspoon salt

Cognae or apricot liqueur

5 egg yolks

6 egg whites

1 pint high-quality vanilla ice cream

Blend the apricots, sugar, salt, 1/3 cup cognac or apricot liqueur and egg yolks in a blender, or force the apricots through a fine sieve and then blend with the sugar, salt, cognac and egg yolks. Beat the egg whites until stiff but not dry and fold into the mixture. Pour into a buttered and sugared 11/2-quart soufflé dish and bake in a 400° oven for 25-28 minutes. Serve with a sauce made by melting down the ice cream and blending in a little of the same liquor used in the soufflé. Serves 4.

Almond Roll

1/2 cup sifted cake flour

1/4 teaspoon salt

3 eggs, separated

1 teaspoon cider vinegar

3/4 cup sugar

3/4 teaspoon almond extract

Confectioners' sugar

31/2-ounce can blanched almonds

34 cup heavy cream

Grease a jelly roll pan, line with wax paper and grease the wax paper. Sift the flour and salt together and set aside.

Beat the egg yolks with an electric mixer for a good 10 minutes. This long, hard beating is essential to achieve a light and beautiful cake. Beat the egg whites until they are frothy, then mix in the vinegar and gradually beat in 1/2 cup sugar. Continue beating until the mixture is satiny and holds a stiff point when you lift up the beater. Stir in 1/4 teaspoon almond extract and fold very gently into the beaten egg yolks. Sift the flour over the surface and fold in until batter is well blended.

Pour into the jelly roll pan and bake in a preheated 350° oven for 12-15 minutes, or until the cake begins to leave the sides of the pan. Take care not to overbake it. Invert on a clean dish towel sprinkled lightly with confectioners' sugar and pull off the wax paper very carefully.

Roll up the cake lengthwise. Leave towel around cake to keep its cylindrical shape as it cools.

While the cake is cooling, chop the almonds coarsely and toast in a 350° oven until golden. Beat the cream until it is very thick and heavy, then stir in the remaining 1/4 cup sugar and 1/2 teaspoon almond extract and the almonds. Unroll cooled cake, spread almond filling over the surface and re-roll. Chill before serving.

Nesselrode Pudding

1 pint light cream

4 egg volks

1 cup sugar

83/4-ounce can puréed chestnuts

1/4 cup Malaga or sherry

1/2 cup currants

1/4 cup seedless raisins

½ cup water

34 cup heavy cream

Marrons glacés and whipped cream for garnish

Heat the light cream in a saucepan until a film shines on top. Beat the egg yolks until light and thick, then gradually beat in 1/2 cup sugar. Add the heated cream gradually and pour back into the saucepan. Cook over a very low heat, stirring constantly, until custard thickens slightly and coats a spoon. Remove from heat, stir in the chestnut purée and Malaga or sherry. Freeze. This is best done the traditional way in an ice cream freezer since the fruits are added later and should be distributed through the pudding.

Cook the currants, raisins, remaining sugar and water together over a moderate heat until the fruit plumps up and the syrup thickens. Beat the heavy cream until it holds a soft shape. Stir the fruit and the whipped cream into the frozen custard. Pack the mixture into a melon or charlotte mold and freeze until firm, either in a freezer or in a container of ice and salt (4-6 parts ice to 1 part rock salt). Unmold on a chilled platter, and garnish with marrons glaces and whipped cream. Serves 6-8.

Note: You can make a purée of fresh chestnuts if you prefer. Remove shell and inner brown skin of 20 plump chestnuts. Cook in a mixture of 11/2 cups water, 1/2 cup sugar and about 1" vanilla bean. When the chestnuts are tender, drain off most of the syrup and either purée chestnuts in a blender or force through a sieve to make a smooth purée.

Maple Walnut Parfait

11/2 cups walnuts 1/2 cup maple syrup Dash of salt 1 cup milk 2 eggs, well beaten 1 cup heavy cream

Chop 1/2 cup of the walnuts coarsely and set aside. Whirl the remaining 1 cup walnuts in an electric blender until fine (or put through a grinder), then combine with the maple syrup, salt and milk. Cook over moderate heat, stirring constantly, until mixture is quite thick. Return to the blender and blend until smooth (or force through a sieve). Mix with the well-beaten eggs and cook, stirring constantly, over a low heat for about 5 minutes. Cool.

Beat cream until it holds its shape, then fold into the nut mixture with the reserved coarsely chopped walnuts. Spoon into 6 parfait glasses and freeze until firm. Serve with or without whipped cream on top. Serves 6.

Visualizer for amateurs

Many people not blessed with the power to visualize what they can't see insist they would be excellent decorators if only they could operate on a trial-and-error basis. Such an approach is too profligate for most of us, but you can practice a close parallel with the help of a new kit of miniature furniture and background components that you can combine and recombine until you arrive at a just-right solution. Then, if you like, you can paraphrase the little rooms in real life. Comprised of all the elements of a five-room house, the kit is assembled (if you can get it away from your children) much like a doll house, and all the colors are from H&G's palette. Called the Irwin Interior Decorator Set, it is available, including a very helpful book of instructions, at Sears, Roebuck for $11.98.

MIEHLMANN

Everything interlocks (no glue, no tools)—partitions, floors, even the tiny furniture parts that you can combine in various ways. And everything is in exactly the same scale: 3/4 inch equals 1 foot.

Here are the five rooms—bath, bedroom, kitchen, living and dining rooms—as they might be laid out in an apartment. Additional rooms, with their furniture, may be purchased separately in individual kits.

Furniture with a future

The totable table

In a sociable household, any corner is apt to became a gathering spot at one time or another, and it will seem all the more hospitable if its furnishings can rise to the occasion. A pertinent example, which H&G confidently cites as furniture with a future, is this small wine table that might play a quiet everyday role in almost any room, yet stand ready to come to a guest's aid whenever or wherever needed. The table is a descendant of the eighteenth-century teakettle table or teapoy, hospitably designed in the first place for "use in the drawing room to prevent company rising from their seats when taking refreshments." The rounded quatrefoil shape and bamboo turned legs make for a prettier effect, when the table is used in multiple, than a line-up of rigidly square-cut tables, and the lower shelf not only provides extra space, but increases the sturdiness of the piece. It comes in a choice of finishes including walnut and dark ash, and measures 15 inches across by 21 inches high. Davis Cabinet is the maker.

One table next to a wing chair in a study makes a handy parking place for a guest's demitasse or liqueur. Beside a comfortable chair in a guest bedroom, the table might be reserved for a wakeup coffee tray. Rooms designed by B. Altman & Co., New York.

Two or more of the tables could be toted from their permanent homes to serve as auxiliaries to a game table of matching design in a family room. On the little tables you could set out drinks, snacks and ashtrays without cluttering up the playing field.

Three of the tables could be pulled up to a sofa to serve a light luncheon during a nonstop committee meeting or a pick-up supper after a cocktail party. Whatever objects the tables customarily hold can be moved to the shelf when refreshments are served.

The marionette theatre is made from a large corrugated cardboard carton and designed to fold flat for storage

Materials

Cardboard carton measuring 241/2 inches wide by 19 inches deep by 36 inches high 1 sheet of corrugated cardboard at least 21 by 241/2 inches 11/2 yards colored felt and 1 yard burlap to cover outside of stage Cravola crayons 5-inch utility knife with serrated blade Masking tape 1 yard black felt 4 yards black peel-and-stick paper Firma-Grip paste 2 yards 30-inch-wide fabric for curtains Four adjustable round brass curtain rods Construction paper-1 sheet for each backdrop Flat wood strips 23 inches long for backdrops 1-inch screw-in hooks-two for each backdrop Silverfoil-covered construction paper 30 inches long by 12 inches wide Three single-prong curtain hooks String of Christmas tree lights

Directions

Cut bottom and top (i.e., the flaps) off the carton, using utility knife in sawing motion. On one 24½ inch side, which will be the rear of the stage, remove a piece 12 inches deep from the top. Cut each 19-inch side in half vertically and then hinge the two pieces together again with masking tape, both inside and outside the seam, so that the sides will fold in when theatre is stored. On the front of the theatre, measure 8 inches up from bottom and 3 inches in from each side and make pencil marks. Then measure 13½ inches down from top and 6 inches in from each side and make two more dots with pencil. Connect these four dots and remove the piece in the center, which will leave you with an opening the shape of a trapezoid for your stage.

For your stage floor and apron, cut a piece of corrugated cardboard 21 inches by 24½ inches. To shape the stage apron, measure 3 inches in from each end along one 24½-inch side and make pencil marks. Mark a 2-inch square at each corner of the same side. Make a diagonal line from the inner corner of each square to each 3-inch mark. Now cut out these two corner wedge shapes you have drawn, to form the stage apron. Cover stage floor with black felt and hinge it to inside back of stage 8 inches from bottom with masking tape, so that it will fold up flat inside the back of the stage when you fold the theatre for storage.

Paste felt over the outside of the theatre and draw stripes on it with crayons in three colors. A neat trick for striping is to select three crayons in the color combination you like, hold them parallel in one hand like the teeth of a comb, and, using a yardstick as a ruler, draw stripes in downward strokes.

You may decorate the front of your theatre any way you like. H&G's theatre was made to look like the entrance to a Big Top by pasting on burlap cut to look like a circus tent. The inside of the theatre is sheathed in black peel-and-stick paper.

Cut curtain fabric into two pieces 30 inches by 36 inches. Make a narrow hem along 36-inch sides of each piece. Make 5-inch hems at one end of each, through which to slide curtain rod. Backdrops may be made of construction paper, with scenes drawn in crayon. Staple the backdrops to thin flat strips of wood 23 inches long. Screw in the 1-inch hooks so that the wood strips can be hooked over curtain rod.

Make holes for the curtain rods at both sides of stage with awl as follows: Make holes for front rod 1 inch in from front of stage and 9½ inches down from top. Slip curtains on rod; insert rod in holes and measure depth of hem necessary at bottom to let curtain barely clear floor of stage. For three backdrop rods, make holes 2, 4 and 6 inches in from back of stage and 8 inches down from top.

For your stage lights, first prepare a reflector to fit inside and above the proscenium. Use silverfoil-covered paper 12 inches wide by 30 inches long. Fold the paper down one-third lengthwise. Fold in 1 inch at each end. Raise folded sections until vertical; shape box corners and staple. Place shaped reflector inside front of stage at top (see sketch, opposite page). Pin in place with single-prong curtain hooks near corners and at center. Drape a string of Christmas tree lights over the hooks, folding back and forth several times, to make a battery of lights.

Christmas balls you can make in H&G Colors

This year again you can order kits to make the spherical fantasies of glowing velvet and rich brocade introduced by House & Garden last December. The makings for four 3-inch balls include the Styrofoam foundations, ribbons and gold braid in varying widths, with straight pins to anchor them, and jeweled stickpins to add a Fabergé finishing touch. You have a choice of two color ranges-warm (reds, oranges, yellow) or cool (blues, greens, purples) - and each kit contains complete instructions. Hang the finished balls in clusters of color on your tree, dangle them from a chandelier or substitute them for wreaths in windows or on an inside or sheltered door. Any one of these regal spheres is pretty enough to bestow as a gift. Kit for four balls may be ordered for $5.95 including postage from Ribbon Decor, P. O. Box 2, East Rutherford, N. J. Specify warm or cool color range when ordering.

Yes, even dried-egg spots

At last! A dishwasher detergent that really does both!
(1) cleans difficult food stains (2) ends water spots

You need a dishwasher detergent that does more than stop water spots. Now it's here!

No matter what the stain—dried-in grease, sticky chocolate, gooey syrup, filmed-in milk, smudged lipstick, stubborn tea stains—even dried-up egg spots—now you can have glasses, silver, dishes, pots that are cleaner, brighter than any other dishwasher detergent can make them—and without water spotting.

Electrasol's even-flow formula cleans without clinging. This is due to an extraordinary wetting agent that makes water "wetter" so it cleans even the most difficult stains—then rolls right off your dishes. Will not spot, film or streak...no matter how hard the water...or what make your dishwasher. No wonder Electrasol is recommended by every leading dishwasher manufacturer.

A large traffic-worthy driveway and attractive entrances welcome guests to the house

In the carport at the front of the Thrower house there is room for three automobiles; twelve more can fit into adjoining paved lot and driveway. Carport is flanked by walks to two front doors.

The terrace outside the study and master bedroom is divided visually by the angle in the concrete-block wall. The wall also screens the terrace, often used for sun-bathing, from sight of neighbors.

In each of the front entrance halls is a fixed-glass window looking into court and a view down hallway beside it, so guests are oriented to house while their coats are hung in walnut closets.

Carefully planned details increase the comfort and enhance the style of the master suite

Although trees and terrace wall assure the privacy of the master bedroom, it has an excellent view of the golf course behind the house. Terrace off bedroom is paved in concrete aggregate.

Master bathroom is really two rooms, connected by a dressing room (see plan, page 252). This section has two showers; the other, with a door to main hall, doubles as second powder room.

A wall of closets with walnut doors and white-painted trim holds Mrs. Thrower's clothes; her husband's are in similar closets in the dressing room at the right of the gray-green bed wall.

"My Keller table is so elegantly tough!"

It's Keller's exclusive Armorgard® plastic top that does it — makes every table as harm-resistant as it is irresistible. Hottest liquids have no effect on that elegant finish. Just wipe it off and the Armorgard top is its beautiful self again. No waxing or polishing . . . ever!

None but a company like Keller, backed by extensive facilities and experience in manufacturing fine dining furniture, can measure up to your rightful styling and quality requirements. You'll find both met most elegantly in every Keller grouping — be it Early American, French Provincial, Contemporary, or Danish styled.

looks into a leisurely future

A frame bridge of white-painted iron connecting the main exhibit building with displays in surrounding park.

ooms sheathed with mirrors or lined with newspaper clippings, staircases covered with silver foil, halls black except for the flicker of movies, undulating carpeted floors flooded with colored light-such was the surrealistic maze of sights, accompanied by sounds of recorded commentary or specially composed atonal music, that initiated visitors into the Thirteenth Triennale of Milan 1964. An international exhibition that takes place every three years or so (the last was in 1960), the Triennale shows off the latest achievements in the decorative and industrial arts and contemporary architecture. In 1964, for the first time in many years, American participation in the exposition received the official blessing of the U.S. Department of State, Designer Jack Lenor Larsen was United States Commissioner.

Every Triennale has a theme. This year's display was a manyfaceted treatise on leisure. Among the fourteen countries that sponsored exhibits were nations with such diverse outlooks on free time as Italy, Brazil, Finland, Great Britain and Austria. The sum was a fascinating nutshell picture of leisure around the world.

In Finland, for instance, free time is devoted largely to sports, while in Germany, Belgium and France, people particularly enjoy the theatre and music. In Italy, looking at TV and listening to the radio are the most popular ways to spend leisure time, and conversation is a close runner-up. Great Britain is divided: many Britishers have a Puritan addiction to work, and leisure is not much more than a snatched moment in the day with tea and radio or a book. But some Englishmen have been brought up in a tradition of elegant leisure that includes hunting, shooting, fishing and gardening, or taking part in energetic sports. Brazil's idea of bliss is simply to have a hammock to rest on, a guitar to strum. In Canada, where a great deal of free time is spent outdoors, in the forests or mountains, or on the lakes, superb equipment is produced for enjoying the outdoors more comfortably. In the U.S .according to the American exhibit free time is for play and play leads to creativity.

Many of the exhibits, however, offered concrete ideas for making leisure ever more pleasant, more profitable or more free from attendant work. Some were in the form of furniture-lightweight, stackable, movable types of seating particularly good for vacation houses, or furniture designed for games or hobbies. There were also a few vacation houses of the future, designed to come as close as possible to being no work and all play.

5. Five-room unfolding trailer. Walls become floors, furniture unstacks, swings or rolls into position for use.

The spectacular decorations were made with scissors and paste from simple materials: tissue paper, felt, fabric scraps in bright colors

The invitations to the Jack Bakers' party-boldly written with a felt pen on white construction paperflaunted a shimmering cover of tissue paper collage. To make the cover, they decorated one side of a 12-by-18-inch sheet of stiff white paper with a composition of tissue paper flowers and the squares and circles of tissue from which the flowers were cut. The other side they covered with bright pink tissue. pasting everything down with a thin solution of Wilhold glue diluted with water. When the collage was dry, it was glazed with the same solution to protect it and give it a surface sheen. Then the whole decorated sheet was folded in half with the pink inside.

The array of banners that lined the Bakers' terrace was made of white felt decorated with glued-on designs of felt and fabric cutouts. Cotton yarn tassels fringed the bottoms, and the tops were stapled to painted wooden battens suspended from tall wooden stakes. (But for extra security, you might nail the battens to the stakes.) The stakes were anchored in handsome, stable but portable bases made from square, hollow, terra-cotta tiles, filled with a mixture of concrete and pebbles.

The dining room tablecloth, like the banners, was made of white felt. Miss Yasuko Shimada, one of Mr. Baker's art students, composed the all-over flower design as she went along, cutting out flowers and leaves from multicolored pieces of felt and gluing them to the white ground with Wilhold. She finished the edge of the oval cloth with a fringe of tassels made from cotton yarn in the same colors as the felt flowers.

Inspiration for Decorators

An Illustrated History of Furnishing, from the Renaissance to the Twentieth Century, by Mario Praz (George Braziller, Inc., $25). A brilliant text and 400 illustrations paintings, drawings and prints, 100 in color-present a rich story of man's home surroundings of the past five centuries. The pictures were selected to show salons, boudoirs, banquet halls, kitchens and baths just as they were lived in, and they give great insight into the people who furnished and enjoyed them. Mario Praz believes that a home should be an expression of an individual's personality and life; he feels no affinity for the man who takes no interest in his surroundings.

The Finest Rooms by America's Great Decorators. Introduction by Russell Lynes, edited by Katharine Tweed (the Viking Press, $18.50). A sampling of rooms from many of the private homes and apartments of today, fifty-two shown in color, seventy-six in black and white. The unique appeal of this book lies in the statements by eight leading decorators on their aims and experiences in creating the rooms included. Rose Cumming, Anne Urquhart, Marian Hall, Eleanor Brown, Mrs. Henry Parish II, William Baldwin, George Stacey and Michael Taylor tell their stories, articulately and inspiringly.

Political Fiction

Corridors of Power by C. P. Snow (Charles Scribner's Sons, $5.95). Number nine in the "Strangers and Brothers" cycle of novels, this will be a must for C. P. Snow fans. For others who are a little weary of American politics in this election year, it might be restorative to take a look behind the scenes in London. A political novel making dramatic use of Parliament. Society, scientists and civil servants, the book is crammed full of action. Yet it has a serious side and raises questions that have not been resolved on either side of the Atlantic.

A carpenter with cabinetmaker know-how could duplicate it, using 1/4-inch hardboard for the wall panel, 3/4-inch pine plywood for the desk top and 1-by-3-inch lumber for the beveled frame, piecing and shaping it to round the curve. But a reasonably proficient do-it-yourselfer might adapt the design to his own capacities by dispensing with the beveled edge and using a stock leg. Both wings measure 21/2 feet across the straight end and 51/2 feet from straight end to tip of curve which is drawn on a 6-inch radius. One side makes a right angle with the straight end, the other slants from the straight end to the perimeter of the curve. H&G'S GARDENER'S prettiest plants as free from insects as possible. Every conscientious gardener also wishes to use only those insecticides that will confine their lethal effects to insects and not harm the birds, bees, pets and people that so often have as firm a hold on his affections as the plants do. Leave aside all philosophical talk about the greatest good for the greatest number (nobody and nothing except microbes outnumber insects) and the balance of nature (to which all gardens are antipathetic in principle). Neither the report of a Presidential committee nor the special pleading of a brilliant writer are required to convince gardeners that increasing dependence on more-and more lethal-poisons is a matter of serious concern. This is not the place for belaboring the point. It is enough that substantial control of the worst pests of our ornamental plants may be achieved without resort to all-out application of really dangerous or deadly poisons.

How to succeed in controlling insects without really trying

Two assumptions are in order: One, that you are willing to settle for substantial rather than complete eradication of plant pests. Two,

And if you can adopt a policy of laissez faire—at least in those parts of your garden where insect depredations will not be objectionably evident, so much the better. Your anti-insect campaign will then be based on eradication when and where actual insects appear on favored plants. Beyond a shadow of a doubt more insects will get away, and a greater number of plants will.

and a greater number of plants will suffer damage more severe than they might suffer otherwise. Eventually the answer must lie with wholly new methods of insect control—loosely lumped together as biological means—coupled with careful use of existing and new agricultural insecticides. But that is another story. Gardeners can afford to wait.

Five general groups of insects are chiefly responsible for most of the disfiguring or lethal damage to ornamental garden plants. They are: aphids (plant lice that suck plant juice); beetles (notably the adults of the Japanese and oriental garden beetles and the taxus or black vine weevil, as well as the larvae of grubs of all these); leaf miners (especially those that disfigure the leaves of boxwood and holly); the scale insects (of Aphids, or plant lice, are probably the most ubiquitous of the gardener's enemies. But constant watchfulness when aphid weather comes makes control surprisingly easy.

Notes for November Gardeners

Cleaning up and battening down dominate preparation for the annual indoor retreat

First weekend

Subsoil stability. The importance of a period of even, stable cold after the planting of hardy spring-flowering bulbs can scarcely be overemphasized. Two months ago, in discussing the preparation of some miniature bulbs for use in a nutshell garden of ferns and rocks in greenhouses, we made the point that a six-to-eight-week period of steady cold, in which roots could form on new bulbs without encouraging the development of top growth, was essential to success. In the case of these miniatures, it was easy to provide such conditions in a deep cold frame and beneath a thick layer of shredded bark topped by a blanket of salt-marsh hay. In the open garden, it is unlikely that you can tailor subsoil conditions quite so readily-especially if the ground in which the bulbs are planted has been freshly dug. But newly planted bulbs should remain for as long a time as possible in a state of quiet coolness. This calls for mulches. It can never be overstressed that mulching new bulb plantings will pay handsome dividends in flowers next spring. (The danger is not so much the tearing or dislocation of plants during frost heaving and thawing, but that the roots have insufficient time to achieve the vigor on which the future career of any true bulb so largely depends.)

Do you wish proof? Then prepare two identical bulb plantings, side by side. Mulch one after planting with a few inches of a light but suitable mulch (not just fallen leaves). Leave the mulch in place until the time when the unmulched bulbs are showing a couple of inches of top growth. Then compare the final results.

Book note. Disarmingly lovely, the newest wildflower book, "The Odyssey Book of American Wildflowers" (Odyssey Press, $12.95) is a mixture of succinct and valuable information, visual excitement, horticultural shortcomings and bookshelf plausibility such as we haven't seen for a long time. To a representative but not especially well-balanced collection of color photographs by Farrell Grehan, text by H. W. Rickett has been felicitously added. Mr. Grehan's photographs are almost always visually attractive and frequently apt portraits of native flowers. Over-all, the plates glow and dance in beauty. But they are only occasionally helpful in establishing a picture of the total plant in its natural setting. Dr. Rickett's text is as clear and even more concise than his splendid amateur's bible, "Botany for Gardeners." It is too easy to dismiss a book like this as just a fine Christmas gift possibility. It is a good book anytime, showing you an aspect of many familiar and humble plants that you might never get a chance to see otherwise.

Second weekend

Unhung baskets. What happens when the summer flower baskets come down? Do you throw away just the plants-or the baskets-or neither? The answer, like so many answers to garden questions, is: That depends. If your hanging baskets are hanging clay pots, you have no problem except with the plants. If the plants were such annuals as petunias, verbenas or browallia (to name three) you would probably heave them onto the compost heap (saving the pots). Unless you have a greenhouse or big bay window, in which case you might, if the flowers were of an especially desirable form and color, keep a few stock plants either transplanted or in the original baskets brought indoorsand make new plants from tip cuttings during the winter for use in new basket arrangements next summer.

True perennials (woody or herbaceous) such as the vincas, many begonias, fuchsias and the like may be carried over under glass and put out again next year. Fuchsias should be rested, cut back so new growth in late winter will create what amounts to new, bushy plants. (Fuchsias are a subject requiring a good deal more discussion than a phrase or two here.) Ivy-leaf geraniums (pelargoniums) may be similarly rested, cut back and rejuvenated, as well as used as a source for cuttings and new plants. (In case you wonder what to do with all the new plants you produce, put them in small pots and give them away to visitors. They will make a bigger hit than John D. Rockefeller's dimes.)

As for the baskets themselves, do not, in any case, leave them outdoors during the winter. Metal ones will rust; others may be broken or cracked. And if you have taken the trouble to line your baskets with sheet moss, and if the moss is still in good condition, simply fill with spare earth the hole left when you took out the plants, hang the basket in a corner of the basement or garage, and water it occasionally to keep the moss springy and tight.

Book note. Garrett Eckbo's "Urban Landscape Design" (Mc-Graw-Hill, $16.50) is perhaps not a book for the casual gardener or homeowner. But it is a profound analysis of the principles basic to landscape design, particularly as they apply to the increasing urbanization of our landscape. Anyone concerned by urban blight and suburban sprawl will find here both a frightening picture of the ugliness and destruction around us and an encouraging view of future possibilities for a world of sanity, beauty and health.

Third weekend

Witchhazels. There are four species of the genus hamamelis, and all of them are well worth inclusion in home landscapes that can make room for a patch of light woodland or an extensive shrubbery border. The witchhazels are unique, perhaps, in that they all have gold-to-ocher autumn foliage and that all have late autumn-tolate-winter or early-spring flowers. Chinese witchhazel (H. mollis) is a sizable shrub with airy roundish leaves that turn golden in autumn and clear yellow tassel-like flowers produced toward the tag-end of winter. It is the most graceful and attractive of the four species for small landscapes.

Similar in size (the almost tree-like height of 12 feet or so) is H. japonica, with bright orange autumn leaves and small yellow flowers in late winter. It is slightly less agreeable (if that is the word) than mollis. Smaller and usually producing less showy but fragrant flowers, H. virginiana blooms in late autumn and H. vernalis usually before March. All four species (and a few specially designated varieties you may find in some nurseries) are hardy in southern New England, Ohio, southern Illinois and the Ozarks, to list a more or less representative group of adoptive habitats. H. virginiana will stand more rigorous climates than the other three. All witchhazels are of circumspect growth habit; all are relatively pest- and trouble-free; all will grow in light overhead shade in ordinary soil. More important, they belong to that much neglected group of "filler" shrubs that are too often overlooked in favor of more formal or spectacular ones.

Book note. Quite different from the Grehan-Rickett book is Eloise Reid Thompson's "Wildflower Portraits" (University of Oklahoma Press, $15). This is really a picture book with more or less botanical description (by Edna Wolf Miner) for each of the hundred species shown. The drawings are charming and explicit: they grow on you. The book will have special appeal for wildflower devotees from the Southwest.

Fourth weekend

Relative humidity. This is the phrase the weather bureau uses especially to tell us how uncomfortable we are during the dogdays of August. But the relative humidity of your spring garden outdoors and your winter garden indoors are as unlike (relatively) as the atmosphere of a steam room and a desert. Put another way: Take the summer air of the open garden, cool that same air to winter temperatures, then bring it indoors into a room heated to the same temperature as the summer garden, and your air will now contain maybe one twentieth of the effective water vapor it held in the beginning. You may be able to settle for a hacking cough and cracks in your dining room table under such a desiccated condition. Your plants often simply curl up their leaves and die. Extra moisture, then, must be liberally supplied in winter-heated houses not may affect almost any woody garden plant, but of which the worst are euonymus scales, oyster shell and San Jose); chinch bug (increasingly a temperate and warmclimate pest of lawns). There are other pests, of course. But the remedies that will control these five kinds will control most others that could be practically dealt with by the gardener himself.

There are four insecticidal materials that are relatively harmless, externally, to warm-blooded animals, and one chemical that. while not harmless, may be used sensibly to obviate the worst attacks of the insects included in the foregoing list. In using these, a number of other insects, as noted, will also be affected. These insecticides, in order of increasing toxicity to animals (including careless people) are: rotenone (and its cube root derivatives, which are harmless except to fish) -always with the proviso that it be used fresh and in adequate concentration; carbaryl (until the past season or so available chiefly in the product bearing the brand-name of Sevin); malathion (member of a dangerous group of organic phosphate poisons, but, as formulated for gardens, surprisingly safe to use); 40 per cent nicotine sulphate (a deadly poison if taken internally, but generally nontoxic after use as a contact spray); chlordane (a cumulative poison of a highly dangerous sort, but the most effective of the lot for controlling many underground larvae and certain lawn pests, including chinch bug).

Now for specifics:

APHIDS, or plant lice-green, black, even red. These are minute creatures first seen, as a rule, covering succulent plant tips and flower buds, where they suck juice from plant tissues and distort growth, destroying bloom. In those areas where their inroads will be most damaging, they may be easily spotted by an attentive gardener. They may also be easily controlled by a puff of the right dust from an inexpensive dust gun or a solution from a sprayer. The insects must be actually touched or covered by the chemical. Safest control: malathion in a cheap tin duster, kept just for this chemical in a state known as "wettable powder." The smell is foul; the poison, in spot applications, virtually harmless to animals. For a liquid, in similarly local application, use 40 per cent nicotine sulphate. Aphids are likely to appear almost anytime during the season on almost any garden plant. Roses, chrysanthemums, tulips are but three of the hundreds or more familiar garden plants that foster an aphid brood of their own. There are related sucking insects, such as white flies, that will be killed if hit by these same insecticides.

BEETLES are legion, even the harmful ones. It is an oversimplification to pick out only a few for attention. But if you can control those on your best ornamental plants, you can control many others that may be present. Rotenone, again, is the safest insecticide for adult beetles. But not all beetles can be hit by rotenone as commonly applied (Asiatic, oriental garden beetles and vine weevils work at night), and not all are killed by it. In concentrations of less than 4 per cent dust (1 per cent wettable powder sprays), and if not fresh at least during the current year, rotenone is likely to be unavailing. But since it is a contact nerve poison and a stomach poison as well, it may catch some sucking insects and even the toughest of the "chewers" like the beetles, Carbaryl may be quite effective against many beetles, and it is relatively safe to all other organisms (including, alas, most aphids). Malathion is next safest. And it is a real aphid killer. BEETLE GRUBS are all subject to control by the highly toxic residual poison known as chlordane (or formulations containing technical chlordane). The fact that this may be the least lethal of its special group is a mere quibble. Yet for grubs and chinch bugs in lawns, for the larvae of vine weevils around the roots of rhododendrons and yews, there is no comparably effective control. So we cannot, realistically, say don't use it. We do say, however, use it only when it is necessary to save your lawn-or a prized plant that shows adult weevil or beetle damage (with night-feeders you can seldom be sure). Apply chlordane to turf late in the season, after most birds have gone south. And don't worry too much about moles, skunks and raccoons. Let them feed somewhere else. It should be noted that chlordane is a herbicide, sometimes an effective preemergence crab-grass killer. But measure the springtime use of chlordane only against dire need. (There are better crab-grass kill-

With regard to Japanese beetles in particular: whatever else you do or don't do, be sure to apply spores of the so-called milky disease, which will affect beetle grubs, increase in the soil, harm no other organisms and hold the Japanese beetle population to a stable minimum. Under several names, this material should be applied, according to directions, to grass and sod areas. Use it once and that's it.

CHINCH BUG is a beetlelike creature, from sub-microscopic to 1/8-inch size, that sucks juices from the crowns of lawn grasses. At noon on a hot sunny day you will see the bugs if you push the grass blades aside at the periphery of suspected damage areas and look carefully (this is a surer test than any other). As noted in a preceding paragraph, chlordane is the best current control. But if chinch bug alone is your problem, dust only the peripheral area where the bugs will work next (not grass already dead) as soon as you are sure of your foe. Alas, there is no quicker, surer, safer control.

LEAF MINERS seldom cause the death of garden plants they infest. But for lovers of boxwood and hollies, where clean foliage is so important to beauty, miners can become a major enemy. Malathion sprays, applied when the infestation is most pronounced in summer, will kill many grubs that would cause next year's damage. Carbaryl may also be effective.

SCALE INSECTS are always disfiguring and may be fatal within five or six years to some species of evergreen euonymus (otherwise one of the most useful vines and groundcovers). If noticed before their colonies have really built up, most types of scale pests, whether with soft or hard protective coatings, can be controlled with so-called dormant sprays, the lethal effects of which will have worn off after the active garden season begins, or with malathion or carbaryl as a follow-up to kill the emergent young. (Timing is important here, and worth special inquiry for the pest, or plant host, at hand.) The oil base of dormant sprays itself helps smother insects under the scales. But these are too strong for use after late winter unless diluted according to maker's directions. In addition to euonymus; yews, lilacs and English ivy are common—perhaps most common—sufferers among ornamental plants.

We may seem to be ruling out dusting with all-purpose formulations. So be it. So be it, also, if we seem to be ruling out DDT, still the most effective of the delayed action or residual poisons. (There are others, of course, too dangerous for amateurs to handle at all.) We are also ignoring mites as one of the major garden pests, and avoiding reference to lindane compounds, which are usually specifics for mites. We do so if only because most mites, at least those that carbaryl and malathion will not control when applied for more important reasons, take the familiar form of red-spider or gray-spider most often seen on needle evergreens or junipers and arborvitae. With these, strong jets of plain water are most effective.

Spraying or dusting your garden is not a matter of law; it is a matter of conscience, convenience and common sense.

so much to help plant roots that's easy—as to improve the air surrounding the plants. That's likely to be harder.

In living rooms, such extra humidity may be minimally added by plant trays kept filled with moist sand or pebbles, by frequent syringing of plant leaves, and, best of all, by special humidifying devices (now commonly available separate from complete air-conditioning equipment). In greenhouses, where floors and plant benches may be hosed down daily if necessary, the problem of adequate humidity is less troublesome. But in another way the greenhouse problem may be even more urgent than that of the living room window. The heat generated in a glass house on a cold winter day can reach the 80's and 90's by sunny noontime. The dry outside air thus brought in and heated may lose almost all the little water vapor it held when it was coldwhich was little enough. Thus the air around your prized plantsthose that need, say, 60 per cent relative humidity to do passably well-would be supplied with only 3 per cent relative humidity instead. At those rates, no wonder the plant tissues dry up—unless you do something about it.

This is not designed to be an essay on air moisture, but it perhaps suggests the urgency of the matter. Specific remedies are in the attentive gardener's control.

Book note. Three kinds of readers may take special pleasure in "The Natural Geography of (Columbia University Plants" Press, $10). One kind is comprised of botanists, taxonomists, ecologists, and other technical experts in the plant world. Another group consists of students (and others, perhaps) who hope to become professionally expert. The third group consists of doctors, lawyers, butchers, bakers-in short, people who like and are curious about plants and who can absorb some pretty involved and fascinating information if the doses are palatable, the pictures good. Add only that the authors are Henry A. Gleason, Head Curator Emeritus, and Arthur Cronquist, Curator, of the New York Botanical Garden. Will these knowledgeable men forgive us if we suggest this as a wondrous bed book for Group Three?

NEW PORTFOLIO OF 500 BAKER DESIGNS, $2.00 The basic list of landscape plants at the Julimar Farm gardens, World's Fair Landscape architect Edward D. Stone Jr., and nurseryman Powers Taylor of Rosedale Nurseries collaborated in achieving an especially well-balanced planting for the Julimar Farm World's Fair exhibition landscape. Special accent trees in some cases were chosen because they were available at the right place, in the right size, at the right time-and they are outstanding examples of their kind. Other woody materials specified are standard at most good nurseries in the northeast (and in comparable temperate zones, too, for that matter). H&G's chief reason for presenting the tree and shrub roster lies in its balance and general merit for small home garden landscapes. Some of the plants are commonly evergreen, designated by (E); some deciduous, losing their leaves in the fall. Many have substantial screening value. All make fine backgrounds for colorful flower beds. Most are inexpensive, as good plants go. Sizes vary from a few inches to full-scale tree heights.
